HECKENBERG'S BERLIN TOWER SUPER CIRCUS.

THIS FAMOUS CIRCUS, the excellence of whose programme last season is still fresh in the memories of their numerous patrons, will shortly make their annual tour of the principal towns in Northern Ireland. Their programme this season surpasses anything yet seen in this country, and the proprietors have, at considerable expense, engaged the most Eminent and Sensational Acts available in the Circus World. They have also secured a large selection of Wild Animals—Lions, Elephants, Tigers, Zebras, &c.—which have been trained to such an extraordinary degree of perfection that their performances are a source of wonder to both young and old. The whole Show is assembled on a very lavish scale. There is everything to please the most fastidious taste. The people of Northern Ireland should not fail to visit this Colossal Circus, undoubtedly the sensation of 1938. HECKENBERG'S SUPER CIRCUS stands unrivalled and supreme.

PORK INDUSTRY IN EIRE.

CRITICISM IN DAIL.

MR. DILLON ON POLICY.

POSITION IN CO. MONAGHAN.

The whole position of the bacon [illegible] industry in Eire, and particularly conditions in County Monaghan following the closing down of the pork markets, was referred to by Mr. James Dillon (U.I.P., Monaghan) when the estimates for the Department of Agriculture came before the Dail yesterday.

Mr. Dillon at the outset said he would like to refer to the extraordinary effect the Government's policy had on the adverse balance of trade between Eire and Great Britain. When Fianna Fail first came into office the Twenty-six Counties had a favourable balance of trade with Great Britain. In 1931 their exports to Britain exceeded their imports by £5,147,000. After five years of Fianna Fail policy the balance had gone the other way and now they had an adverse balance of £1,397,000 on the trade with Britain and this on a very much smaller volume of trade. A continuance of that policy would be fraught with disaster for the country.

FINISHED WITH BALDERDASH.

When Fianna Fail started out to govern they used to say that if trade with Britain went to hell they would find alternative markets. But no alternative markets were found and Fianna Fail was finished with all that balderdash. Now they were back on terra firma and had to face the facts of the situation. One of the most formidable of those facts was the adverse trade balance with Britain and the longer the Government postponed dealing with it the worse the consequences would be.

One of the matters, continued Mr. Dillon, to which he wished to direct the attention of the Minister for Agriculture was the position of the bacon and pork industry which needed urgent reform. Two years ago the Government established a Pigs Marketing Board and a Bacon Marketing Board. These boards were supposed to represent everybody's interests in the industry, but the bacon curers had got control of both boards and were running them with the sole object of increasing their own profits. These curers were making immense profits without any regard whatever for the interests of the bacon industry as a whole. He challenged the Minister to go into the accounts of these curers and ascertain the profits for himself. The curers' profits had skyrocketed while the profits on production of the small farmers had fallen so low that the pig population had declined seriously and small farmers were going out of production.

MONAGHAN REPERCUSSIONS.

"I am particularly interested," went on Mr. Dillon, "on the repercussions of this policy in County Monaghan. Practically every small farmer in Monaghan made a considerable income out of raising pigs. A very large number have already been driven out of business altogether. How many in this House realise the ruthless and ferocious persecution to which the farmers of Monaghan have been subjected by the Department of Agriculture in this business of pig production?

"These farmers used to slaughter their pigs on their own farms and then bring the carcases to the local pork markets where Northern and Southern curers were brought into competition in the purchase of the pigs. In some cases the fresh pork was exported and the farmers were able to use the offal for food.

"A lot of people were now persuaded that the killing of pigs on the farm was unhygienic and that the pigs so killed were not properly dressed. This was all nonsense. The Monaghan pigs were killed by skilled craftsmen who did their work well.

"One Northern curer told me that many of the Scottish curers preferred the home killed pigs to the factory slaughtered animals. In Northern Ireland they held a different view from the Department of Agriculture here and they preserved their pork markets.

"The departments say that veterinary ante-mortem inspections are necessary in the interest of bacon consumers, and that pigs must therefore be sent to the factories for sale. But Belfast bacon, which had ante-mortem inspection, was being sold to-day in Sligo, Donegal, and other counties along the Border. In Clones, where that bacon was coming in, the Northern curers were prepared to attend there and buy pork, but they would not be allowed to come in. Clones Urban Council asked to have their pork market restored, but the Minister will not let them have it back. Clones, as a town, is surrounded on three sides by the Border and has suffered much as a result of the economic war being flattened out altogether

"AT MERCY OF FACTORIES."

"Since the pork market was abolished, small farmers in County Monaghan are now more at the mercy of the factories than the tenants in the old days were of the landlords. They have to be subservient and lick the boots of the curers to sell their bacon to-day. The result of all this policy has been an alarming decline in the pig population, which has slumped over 25 per cent.

"What is the effect of this on Clones and other towns in the North? In Clones the abolition of the pork market has meant a big loss in revenue which was brought to the town in relief of rates. Shops are now being closed down and rateable valuations are decreasing, while the number of unemployed is growing. But the Government will do nothing to help the town.

"In Northern Ireland curers are allowed to sell bacon in Monaghan, and I think it is good they should be. It is unreasonable to prevent them coming in here to buy pork. Pork markets should not be abolished in County Monaghan while they are carried on along the Northern side of the Border."

Referring to the maize meal mixture in operation, Mr. Dillon denounced it as "a gnastly experiment. The whole thing is a cod, fraud, and disaster which had increased the cost of maize meal to the farmers of this country by 2s 6d per cwt. It was designed to increase the acreage under oats and barley and provide more employment on the land. What it has done is to substantially decrease the acreage of both crops. It decreased the pig population, wiped out the fowl industry, decreased the egg exports—one of our most valuable exports—from over £2,000,000 to £700,000. Now the Minister is trying to devise some means of saving his face. He was quite oblivious to the fact that when the price of maize meal was raised, the farmer's wife would kill the fowl."

Concluding, Mr. Dillon said he would urge the Minister to give notice to the Pigs Marketing Board that unless they were prepared to run their business in the interests of the producer he would abolish it. The home sales quota would be wiped out since it enabled the curers to preserve a price ring and charge the consumers an unreasonable price for bacon.

CONDITIONS IN LOUTH.

Mr. J. Coburn (U.I.P., Louth) drew attention to the position of the pig industry in his constituency. When farmers had pigs ready for sale in Louth they could not get rid of them because the quota at the local factory in Dundalk was filled. The factories were willing to take in the pigs, but the Ministry's Department would not allow them. In fact it would actually prosecute them if they bought the pigs. One factory in Louth he had in mind was only allowed to take 150 pigs a week or 600 a month, although the factory was able to cure 1,000 pigs a month. At one time, when bacon from every other country was coming into Ireland, this factory employed 40 to 50 men; now it only employed eight or nine men on short time. The pork market should be reopened, so that Northern buyers could come in and purchase pigs as heretofore.

Mr. T. P. Dowdall (F.F., Cork City) said if the adverse trade balance was so bad as the Opposition suggested the country would become bankrupt, but the Opposition did not tell the whole truth. The invisible exports of the country must be taken into account. Britain had a big adverse balance, but it was far from bankruptcy. There had been a decline in trade from 1931 to 1934—it would be ridiculous not to admit it—but there had also been a big decline in prices, and this had to be borne in mind. The profits of the bacon-curers were referred to by Mr. Dillon. The Minister could not have these profits disclosed to him, but the Prices Commission or the Revenue authorities could investigate them, and if there was excessive profit it should be divided up so that the farmers would get some of it.

Dr. Ryan, Minister of Agriculture, concluding the debate, said he did not agree with the Deputies who said that the Pigs Marketing Board should be scrapped. He admitted, however, that things might not be perfect. There was a committee of the whole Department of Agriculture being set up to inquire into the pig industry, and he invited Deputies on the opposite side of the House to make any recommendations they thought fit to improve the position of the industry.

The vote was agreed to, and the Dail adjourned until Tuesday.

LIVERPOOL CORN.—Wheat quiet, favouring buyers. Flour dull and unchanged; straight run 29s ex mill. Maize quiet and favouring buyers; American yellow 5s 9d to 5s 9½d. River Plate scarce and nominal. Oats quietly steady; English white 8s 6d to 9s. Oatmeal steady. Barley quiet; No. 3 Canadian Western 27s. Bran firm, fair trade; thirds steady, moderate demand.

LIVERPOOL PRODUCE (First Report)—Cane sugar steady. Cocoa—West African spot dull and neglected; forward shipments quiet. Coffee quiet at late rates. Rice steady and quiet. Linseed quietly steady. Palm oil steady and slow. Tallow slow of sale. Palm Kernels quiet. Rubber—Hard fine Para steady, 6½d spot and forward. Linseed oil quiet. Resin quietly steady, American types on spot 14s 9d f.g.h., 19s 6d w.w. Petroleum steady. Turpentine quiet. Ground nuts steady, decorticated Coromandels £10 11s 3d July-August shipments.

Second Report.—Cane sugar steady. West African cocoa on spot idle and uninteresting; forward dull and easier, sellers G.F. Accra old crop 21s 3d; forward shipments dull and easier; July-August new crop 23s 9d, November-January buyers 6d less c.i.f. to the Continent. Coffee steady and quiet on spot. Rice slow. Linseed firm and dearer; River Plate quoted £11 16s 3d July-August shipments. Palm oil demand very slow and easier; sellers soft oils July-August £12 15s, August-September £12 17s 6d, September-October £13 transit, 2s 6d less ex quay terms; Lagos forward nominally £13 10s. Tallow idle. Palm kernels rather easier, demand very quiet; sellers August £9, September £9 1s 3d. Rubber—Hard fine Para firmer at 6½d spot and forward; plantation easier, buyers spot 7 1-16d, August 7½d. Linseed oil very quiet. Resin steady and quiet. Petroleum steady. Turpentine easier; American spot 34s duty paid. Ground nuts quietly steady. Lard—American refined boxes steady at 48s to 50s.

LIVERPOOL PROVISIONS.—Poultry market—Fowls 7½d to 8d, chickens 10d to 11d, small spring chickens unquoted.

BIRKENHEAD CATTLE—Smaller supplies of cattle were rather short of well finished bullocks and heifers, but the quality of cows and bulls was well up to the usual standard. Trade steady, late rate being fully maintained. Choice small bullocks and heifers made 8½d, best heavy descriptions 7½d, secondary classes 7½d, best young cows and bulls 6d, aged sorts 4d to 4½d. The lamb supply was just equal to the demand, and met a firmer trade. Best small weights made up to 10d and heavy classes 9½d, with poor sorts at proportionate rates. Canadian cattle steady at about late rates. Supplies for the week were 684 Irish cattle, 648 Canadian cattle, and 4,608 lambs.

GLASGOW CORN.—The market is quiet for wheat, with No. 1 Manitoba about unchanged at around 42s per 480lbs. c.i.f. Glasgow. Plate maize keeps firm with 8s 1½d per cwt. the spot value, while 7s 6d per cwt. is asked for the first arrival next week of new crop; later positions of new crop range from 6s 7½d to 6s 10½d per cwt. Grinding barley is unchanged, both spot and forward, and home mill offals rule steady at late rates. First grade Australian flour is nominal at 33s 6d per 280lbs. ex store plus quota.

GLASGOW IRON AND STEEL—The market for scrap material has no particular feature, conditions remaining unchanged.

CLEVELAND IRON—Market deadly dull and no likelihood of restoration animation until embarrassingly heavy stocks have been much reduced. The output of Cleveland pig has ceased, and accumulations of tonnage at blast furnaces little drawn upon consumers of foundry iron having still large quantities of Continental material to use before they can accept normal supplies of local brands. The statistical state of the East Coast hematite department continues disquieting, notwithstanding the curtailed production. Consumers of semi-finished iron and steel extensively bought, and off market quite a glut of steel semis. Manufacturers of finished material diligently seeking orders. Producers of some commodities very short of work. Iron and steel scrap abundant and demand negligible.

FRENCH ARMS PROBLEMS.

FORMER PREMIER'S STATEMENT.

M. Flandin, former Premier and Foreign Minister, said yesterday in an interview that the only effective solution of France's rearmament difficulties would be industrial mobilisation, states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" Paris correspondent. He criticised the system of favouritism in nationalised factories engaged on aviation manufacture, which, he declared, had the effect of slowing down production in the private armaments industry.

In State-controlled factories, he pointed out, every employe from the office-sweeper to the technical expert received 25 per cent. more than the corresponding employe of private enterprises.

Dealing with the apprentice system introduced in factories working for national defence, M. Flandin said that apprentices produced machine parts, the majority of which were perfect. But, owing to a clause in the collective agreement, they could not be counted in the production of the workshops, and all between the two Houses, but it is not expected that this will materialise.

SURPRISE DEFEAT OF MONUMENT.

IN NEWMARKET RACE.

PANORAMA STILL UNBEATEN.

The July course at Newmarket on a fine day is one of the most delightful settings for racing in England, writes "Hotspur," the "Daily Telegraph" racing correspondent. There was a great finish to the Ellesmere Stakes over a mile and three furlongs, Suzerain beating Monument by a short head. Despite the fact that he had 9st. 7lb. to carry, Monument was in front with Dragonnade when the small field came into view, and there he stayed until the last few strides.

Sly Abbess, who was well backed to beat Monument, was a moderate third, after having challenged ineffectively a furlong from home. I thought the distance would be too short for Suzerain, whose other success this season was gained in the Yorkshire Cup over two miles, but Mr. Anthony de Rothschild's five-year-old showed that he retains a nice turn of speed, and his trainer, Ted Leader, must be congratulated on turning him out in perfect condition.

Although Monument started at odds-on, he did not go well in the Market despite his victories in the Coronation Cup at Epsom and the Kempton Park "Jubilee" earlier in the season. It was a very near thing, however, and nobody could tell from the stands whether he or Suzerain had won until the numbers went into the frame.

TRAINER COMPENSATED.

Boyd-Rochfort, the trainer of Monument, was quickly compensated when Ambrose Light, whom he trains for Mrs. J. E. Widener, gained a comfortable victory in the Waterbeach Handicap at the expense of Kinderscout and Comana.

Kinderscout looked the winner a furlong from home, but Ambrose Light finished very fast, and, challenging up the hill, had a couple of lengths to spare when the post was reached. The early leaders were the Dentist and Bonnie Scotland, but both dropped back after five furlongs. Davy Dolittle, who started just a better favourite than Kinderscout, ran indifferently, nor did Over Coat ever look like winning

Ambrose Light is in the Steward's Cup at Goodwood, but, naturally, he will get more weight now. However, the French-bred son of Pharos won with something in hand yesterday, and I shall be interested to see how he is weighted with Davy Dolittle, Allegiance, and The Dentist, all of whom were unplaced yesterday

Panorama retained his unbeaten record in the Fulbourne Stakes, gaining his fourth victory with his head on his chest. Odds of 9 to 2 were laid on Boyd-Rochfort's charge, who was in front from the time the tapes went up, and P. Beasley was looking round for any possible danger long before he passed the post three lengths ahead of Aurora.

Bountiful ran well all the way to finish third, but Lady Abbess colt did moderately. Perhaps that is an unjust comment, for Panorama is so fast that the opposition are carried off their legs from the start.

Panorama is a grand colt, but it is interesting to note that he took a full second longer to cover this five furlongs 140 yards than Mirza II. did when winning the July Stakes 12 months ago. On his breeding he may never stay, but I cannot see him being beaten this year at any rate.

SLIP IN WELL BEATEN.

Ascot form was discounted by the failure of Slip In in the Milton Handicap run over the last mile and a quarter of the Suffolk Stakes course. Walter Earl's charge had finished third to Unbreakable and The Bittern at Ascot, and with 7st 11lb. he looked a good thing for yesterday's event.

Slip In was never prominent, however, and failed to reach the first three behind Concentration, who scored very decisively by three lengths from Ashtoreth, with Horatio a poor third. Grace Note was prominent on the outside for a long way, but faded out completely a quarter of a mile from home, and eventually finished last.

BADLY DRAWN, YET WON.

Despite being badly drawn, Chancery proved an easy winner of the Plantation Stakes, drawing away from Lydia inside the distance to pass the post with three lengths to spare. Genesis was third, but Letitia colt was probably third best, for he was not ridden out when his jockey saw that he could not win.

The favourite, Golinda, was not far behind the placed horses, but never promised to win, and I also made a favourable note of Paradise Park, who should win for Lady Ralli before long.

On last year's form Bygone, a surprise runner, was a reasonably good thing for the Ixworth Selling Plate, and he was backed down from 6 to 1 to favouritism. Ridden by J. Marshall, the son of Lemnarchus was always well placed, and taking the lead from Evening Mist inside the distance, drew out to win readily by a length and a half.

Pali and President's Putter had a good race for second place, which went to Pali by a short head. There was plenty of competition for the winner, and it was not until Bisgood had bid 700 guineas that he was able to buy in his colt.

BOY'S STATION ROOF FALL.

HAS MIRACULOUS ESCAPE.

SHOCK FOR A PASSENGER.

A Govan boy, Robert Lawson (9), of Merryland Street, had a remarkable escape when he fell through the glass roof of Copland Road Underground Station, Glasgow, landed on the roof of a train, rolled off and toppled on to a man who was about to enter one of the carriages. Suffering from shock and cut by broken glass, he was removed to the Victoria Infirmary and detained for observation.

James Mallinson, Southbrae Drive, Glasgow, on whom the boy fell, was uninjured, but so concerned about the boy that he followed him to the infirmary in a taxi.

Had there been no train in the station at the time of the occurrence the boy would have fallen on to the live rails and would almost certainly have been killed by an electric shock.

ALLAM'S WEEKLY SALES.

Yesterday Messrs. R. J. Allam, Ltd., held their weekly sale of fat sows and Boars in the Oxford Mart, Oxford Street, Belfast.

Larger supplies were on offer, and with cross-Channel markets firmer trade was brisk and prices on an average showed an advance of 3s per cwt. over last week.

First quality York sows ranged between 40s and 42s; second grade 37s to 39s, and less for rough sorts according to condition.

REMARKABLE FIGURES

GIVEN IN HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Capt. EUAN WALLACE, Financial Secretary to the Treasurer, submitted estimates of the Forestry Commission when the British House of Commons went into Committee of Supply.

He explained that there was no Minister responsible for the Commission, and added, amid laughter, "I am introducing this vote as the 'maid of all work' in the House of Commons."

He pointed out that 215 forest units had now been established. Over 1,000,000 acres of land had been acquired by the Commission, of which 377,000 acres were now under woods and plantations. Since 1924 over 1,300 forest workers' holdings had been established in connection with forestry operations.

"I think we may well look forward," he concluded, "to the time when the operations of this Commission, so far from demanding a financial subvention from the taxpayers, may provide the taxpayers with a tangible and substantial asset." (Cheers.)

Mr. D. R. GRENFELL (Lab., Gower), dealing with the work of the Commission, of which he is a member, said they had to accept the responsibilities put upon them by statute "unwept, unhonoured, and unsung," "and, alas! unpaid," he added, amid laughter.

Remarking that he had been a member of the Commission since 1929, he said they had acquired an average of 50,000 acres a year, and now held just over 1,000,000 acres. The average price of plantable land was £3 an acre, but prices were rising.

"The House will realise something of the magnitude of the work," he said, "when it is remembered that every year for every man, woman, or child in the country one tree is planted—nearly 50,000,000 a year—and we have in our nurseries about 250,000,000 seedlings and plants.

"The Forestry Commission has no official secret," he said, amid laughter.

"Its work is an open book, and everyone can see what is done from day to day." It gave employment to a large number of people.

"We are now producing timber in this country," he declared, "which is equal and better in quality than in any country in Europe." It did not suffer in comparison with any timber in the world.

Sir EDWARD GRIGG, Chairman of the National Home Grown Timber Council, in a reference to Sir George Courthope, Chairman of the Forestry Commission, said that it was his estate that supplied the original oak for the repair of the roof of Westminster Hall.

The debate was adjourned.

THE GARDENER'S CORNER

Flowering Shrubs Brighten The Garden

By "THE MAN WITH THE HOE"

SHRUBBERIES are now looking bright, with many flowering shrubs. Buddleia globosa, with its orange balls, is as popular as any. B. variabilis (Davidii) and its varieties are considered to be some of the most beautiful of summer and autumn flowering shrubs, with their spikes of purple and lavender-coloured flowers. Wrigelias, now called Diervilla, are also in bloom, and coluteas, which are popularly known as bladder sennas. Fuchsias, too, especially coccinea, and corallina, are gay, and the Spanish broom, with its golden yellow flowers. It and a white flowered variety, which bloomed in May, were raised from seed.

It is usual to plant bushes on the verge of a lawn, and in small gardens standard roses look well. The half-standards are generally the best suited for this purpose, as they stand the gales much better than the full standards.

Both of these require to be securely staked. Golden spray and Madame Edourd Herriot are good roses as standards, and Emma Wright and Ophelia are beautiful. Beside roses, there are other plants suitable for the verge of larger lawns which are effective. Pampas grasses and New Zealand flax, especially the gold-leaved variety; magnolias and yuccas are also often planted here, also eucryphia pinnatifolie and libertias. If a tropical effect is desired, a few clumps of bamboos and cordyline australis are useful, and an occasional eucalyptus tree adds to the picture. This latter can be raised from seed, but it requires shelter and staking until well established.

Now Masses of Bloom.

The Penzance sweet-briars are now in masses of bloom, but they do not appear to be grown so much as formerly. They require no regular pruning, and year after year bloom like the dog roses in the hedgerows. Paul scarlet climber on a pergola is blooming freely at present. It is a distinctive rose, which few pass by unnoticed.

Herbaceous borders are now getting bright with colour. Delphiniums, which are always attractive, are showing in many shades of blue. Eryngium amethystinum is particularly handsome, and scabious caucasica. The native varieties of this plant, found over the countryside, are often gathered for indoor use. Monkshood is another blue flower which is also in bloom at the present time.

Alstromerias give cut flowers in abundance, but these plants require to be kept within bounds, as they are tremendous spreaders, and in a few years, if left alone, will cover an entire plot to the detriment of the other flowers growing alongside, so they are best grown in a wild spot by themselves. Geums, purple flowered geraniums and sweet williams also look bright.

Gaillardias are also showing their brilliant colours, which make them stand out from other plants. G. grandiflora and G. maxima, with their varieties, are perennials of this plant, and there are a number of annual varieties which are also beautiful. Some of the perennial kinds have been raised from seed, and are now coming into flower.

Seeds To Propagate.

The following plants, the seed of which was sown in six-inch pots about a month ago, are now showing. The pots were placed on a walk in a position facing north. Their names are gypsophila paniculata, trollius, ledebouri, pyrethrum, roseum, primula bulleyana (which is quite hardy), and paparer orientale (hybrids). They will soon be pricked out into boxes, and kept there until they grow strong enough to plant out.

Seeds of many perennials may be propagated in the open air in this way during the month of July. Wallflowers are now being sown in beds, so as to be ready for autumn planting. Cheiranthus allioni, the Siberian wallflower, has been particularly attractive this year, and is still blooming freely in some places, so it should also be sown now.

In the kitchen garden, the planting out of celery still continues. An eminent authority on vegetable growing states that the trenches should be 12 to 15 inches deep, and filled with manure up to two or three inches of the top. The manure should be trodden in.

He states that it is a mistaken idea to plant in deep trenches, so the trenches should be almost level with the ground when planted. The width of a trench for a double row should be about 18 inches, and the plants set out about nine inches to a foot apart. Four feet or more should be allowed between double rows. Dustings of soot are desirable from time to time.

Dwarf kidney beans have been difficult to raise this year, so blank spots may be resown, or may be filled up by careful transplanting from places where they are too thick. A foot between each plant is recommended to get the best results. Another sowing may be tried now, if at once. A sowing of coleworts should now be made. They will come in when the summer cabbage are over.

FASCIST LEADERS AMUSE DUCE.

HOOP OF FIRE JUMP.

THE HEDGE OF BAYONETS.

Fascist leaders, some of them grandfathers, were put through further athletic tests yesterday at the Mussolini Forum.

Six kinds of jumping obstacles included a live horse, a hedge of rifles and bayonets, a blazing hoop, a tank.

There were very few finalists for the jump into the hoop of fire. Competitors jumped off a springboard. One scorched his heel.

One of the less agile leaders fell as he was jumping the hedge of bayonets and was wounded in the chest.

STOLE FROM DYING GODMOTHER.

COUNTESS AND EMERALD.

REGARDED AS A TALISMAN.

PARIS, Friday. — Mme. Florine Franken-Nardus was sentenced to-day by a Paris court to 18 months' imprisonment for stealing an emerald pendant from the deathbed of her godmother, Mme. Michel, known as the Countess Merschoff. Mme. Franken-Nardus, will benefit from the First Offenders Act.

The painter Le Mailler, who was alleged to have sold stones in the pendant to a London jeweller, was acquitted of receiving (wires the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" correspondent).

The emerald, which was the chief stone in the pendant, and was a present from the eccentric Charles II., of Brunswick, the "Diamond Duke," was regarded by Countess Merschoff as a talisman, and she had told friends that on the day she lost the jewel she would die. It disappeared twelve hours before her death last February.

During to-day's hearing it was contended that the Countess had said that she would leave the pendant to her goddaughter after her death.

GERMANS AND RHINAU.

WANT TO BUY FRENCH LAND.

STRASBOURG, Friday.—The inhabitants of the little village of Rhinau, on the Franco-German frontier, are attempting, with, however, apparently little success, to resist the German authorities who want them to give up the land they own on the German side of the Rhine. When Alsace returned to France the new frontier cut clean through the village.

The inhabitants were asked by the German authorities to sell, but refused, and the Mayor has now been informed that expropriation proceedings are to take place as the land is wanted for fortifications.

As a protest the owners of the land have refused the invitation to attend the expropriation proceedings.—Exchange.

SATURDAY COMMENTARY BY LADY OXFORD AND ASQUITH

The PASSING PAGEANT

I lunched with the Prime Minister and Mrs. Chamberlain last week, and as there was no party, Mrs. Chamberlain asked me to go early so that she could show me the improvements made in 10 Downing Street. I am always nervous of "improvements," because I am over-critical and over-fastidious in matters of change and taste. Nor am I very successful in trying, from courtesy, to praise what I do not genuinely admire.

But I was delighted with all that has been done by Mrs. Chamberlain, with the assistance of Sir Philip Sassoon and the Office of Works. What was once my lovely bedroom, looking out on the Horse Guards' Parade, has been transformed into Mrs. Chamberlain's boudoir; and my own drawing-room—as apart from my husband's writing-room—is the reception-room where the Prime Minister and Mrs. Chamberlain receive, and has no writing table or bookshelves.

RECALLED MEMORIES.

THE walls are hung with three beautiful Turners—I think lent by the National Gallery—and other pictures which I had not time to observe. The furniture is the private property of Mrs. Chamberlain, and is pretty and comfortable: chairs, sofas and cushions covered in pale-coloured brocades. There is a new staircase, and no bedrooms are on the drawing-room floor. I followed Mrs. Neville all over the upper rooms, and no doubt the changes have made a far more convenient and practical house than the one our large family inhabited for so many years.

My visit recalled many memories, and I was glad to recognise old friends in the portrait of Sir Robert Walpole in the room where my husband did all his work, and the portrait after Van Dyck of the first Earl of Portland, 1536, above an ornamental table, which in my husband's day was piled up with his books and papers. After this inspection the Prime Minister joined us for a lunch à trois in the small dining-room leading into the larger one. He looked well, and his mind and conversation were keen, quick, and alert.

He is much more like his father than the other members of his family whom I have known. We discussed the attitude of Liberal and Labour in the House of Commons with great frankness, and I left with the feeling that Neville Chamberlain is a man of courage and integrity.

I VISIT LORD'S.

LORD and Lady Baldwin invited me, my daughter Princess Antoine Bibesco, and Priscilla, my only grandchild, to their box at Lord's last Saturday to watch the Test Match. Their box was full until the interval for tea, so we did not see Hammond's remarkable innings, about which everyone was talking. Among the President's many guests I found myself next to Sir Thomas Inskip, for whom I have a great regard. Apart from other sympathies, such as his attitude over the controversy about the Prayer Book we deplored the selfishness of the dwellers, or the owners, of the London squares.

It is incredible to me that anyone should be opposed to showing the squares to the public, if not all the year round, at any rate in the hot summer months of August and September, when the owners of houses in most of our beautiful squares leave London, and are spending their holidays in Scotland, the South of France, golfing, fishing, or shooting from their country houses, without a thought of their less fortunate and poorer neighbours, whose playing fields are on the London pavements or who live to far to reach our many open parks.

"Sir Thomas Inskip . . . said he had been inundated with letters."

". . . Mrs. Chamberlain's changes at 10 Downing Street delighted me . . ."

FALLIBLE GUIDE.

SIR Thomas said that he had been inundated with letters of abuse after he had expressed the opinion that the gates of the squares should be left open and seats placed—such as you see in Paris—where tired people can sit and smoke and watch their children playing. He added that he had been grateful to me for having written a letter to the "Times" backing him. I told him, what I tell everyone, that public opinion is the worst of guides to conduct, and should never deter one from doing what one considers right; and added that all the years we were in 10 Downing Street I had seldom seen it right. Lord Baldwin then joined us; and I went to a front seat to watch the cricket.

NOT SO EXCITING.

WHEN my sister Laura married Alfred Lyttelton we were all cricket fans, and always went to Lord's, but after I married my husband was too busy at the Bar or in the House of Commons to watch cricket, and the last time he and I went to Lord's together was when Sir Stanley Jackson was the president of the M.C.C. I do not think cricket is as exciting to watch to-day as it was when I was young. For what reason I do not know; but it appears to an outsider like myself that the wicket is either too perfect, or the players too timid, to give the thousands who collect all night in the hopes of getting into Lord's a proper show for their money.

I dined with Lord and Lady Crewe this week and was delighted to see how beautiful and comfortable they had made their new house in King's Road. The Queen of Spain was one of their guests, and looked very handsome in a gold lamé dress and diamond tiara. She sat between her host and the Ambassador of Brazil, and Lady Crewe sat between Lord Hardinge and Lord Lothian, and after dinner the Queen and several guests played bridge.

LORD OXFORD'S TRIO.

THE one person that I wanted to talk to was my host, and after conversing with Mr. Hore Belisha, I was delighted when he joined us. I have known Lord Crewe ever since he came to Glen when I was very young. My father said to me: "That is the sort of man I wish you girls would marry—he is not only clever and handsome, but he will have a future"; and turning to me he added: "He is worth all your riding friends put together!" I could not but reply that, as I was hardly out of the schoolroom, he was not likely to pay much attention to me. Nor did I perceive any great desire on his part to marry any of us. I little thought at the time that he would become one of my greatest friends after my marriage.

"Mr. Hore Belisha joined us at Lord Crewe's party."

I remember my husband saying to me in Downing Street: "I am never certain that I am right if I find myself in disagreement with Crewe, Edward Grey, or Alfred Spender; they are the Liberals for whom I have the highest regard." Lord Crewe has every quality of character and of intellect—and, more than that, he is one of the most distinguished, cultivated, and lovable men that I have ever met.

NOBLESSE OBLIGE.

LADY Ludlow's annual musical party at Bath House was less crowded than usual, because those of her Royal guests were unable to attend owing to mourning for the Queen's mother. In the intervals of the music everyone expressed their sympathy with her Majesty. There is one thing certain — that however acute her private sorrow it will never interfere with her public duties.

Our Royal family have never failed their subjects, and the reason of their immense popularity is because they devote every day of their lives to serving them.

It was a gracious act on the part of the President of the French Republic to postpone the Royal visit, over which France—and her people—is taking infinite trouble. Paris and Rome are the two loveliest capitals in Europe adapted for festival occasions.

Speaking for myself, though I love a crowd, I have never cared much for galas—flowered arches, festoons of coloured paper, processions, flags, banners, barricades, police, detectives, and stretcher-bearers, etc., are apt to spoil the most beautiful streets of any town. But a crowd of people as enthusiastic as the French will be well worth watching, and our King and Queen are certain to have a more than royal reception.

CANADIAN DEFENCE STORM.

ELECTION CHALLENGE

ISSUED BY THE PREMIER.

TRAINING OF THE R.A.F.

OTTAWA, Saturday.—The possibility of a general election over Canada's relations with Great Britain regarding Defence has been raised by a sharp passage at arms between the Prime Minister, Mr. MacKenzie King, and the Conservative leader, Mr. R. B. Bennett, in the Dominion House of Commons last night.

Mr. Bennett asserted that the Canadian Government had "refused Great Britain the means to defend itself in case of war" by withholding permission for the establishment of training schools for the R.A.F. in Canada.

Mr. MacKenzie King denied that such permisison had been sought, but added that it was the Government's view that Canada should not permit any military force to be stationed in Canada under the control of another Government.

Bitterly assailing Mr. Mackenzie King's attitude, Mr. Bennett declared:

"No Canadian is worthy of his great heritage who would deny the old partner who established us the right to create those centres she may not have at home to preserve her life and the life of every man who enjoys freedom and liberty under the protecting aegis of the British flag."

The Prime Minister retorted that Canada would look after her own defence in co-operation with other parts of the Empire, but that co-operation would most effectively be maintained and carried out by each part managing its own affairs and being responsible to its own Parliament.

He assured the House that there would be no objection to the training of British Air Force officers in Canada, but they must be trained in Canadian owned and controlled establishments.

"There is not a man in this Parliament who believes more strongly in the British Empire and the part it is playing in the world to-day than myself," he declared.

"I believe the British Empire can be kept together and made an effective instrument for peace throughout the world by co-operation between the self-governing Dominions and the United Kingdom.

"I do say, however, that any reversal of the trend of the past hundred years with respect to military establishments would be a factor in dismembering the British Empire, and would create all sorts of controversy."

AIR MISSION AND FACTORIES.

Mr. Bennett raised another point in regard to Defence, when he said he had been informed that the British Air Mission had not visited any factories in Canada but was merely given a memorandum indicating the capacity of Canada's factories.

"They had no knowledge, for instance," he asserted, "that this country could produce shells of a certain type, that factories were willing to enter into a contract for the production of shells if we were prepared to sanction it."

Mr. MacKenzie King replied that Mr. Bennett's information was entirely incorrect.

He branded as "absolutely false in every word" the "insidious campaign that there has been lack of willingness to co-operate." He declared that there had been a spirit of absolutely full co-operation.—Reuter.

BOMBING OF BRITISH VESSELS.

DELIBERATE ATTACKS

ARE DENIED BY FRANCO.

WANTS TO BE FRIENDLY, HE SAYS.

Sir Robert Hodgson, the British Government's Agent to General Franco's headquarters at Burgos, called at the Foreign Office, where he was received by Viscount Halifax, the Foreign Secretary, writes the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" Diplomatic correspondent. They discussed the general attitude of the Spanish insurgent authorities towards a number of matters of concern to the British Government.

It is understood that in General Franco's reply to Britain's demand for assurances that there would be a complete cessation of the bombing of British merchantmen in Spanish Government ports he emphatically denies any intention to single out British ships for attack by air forces co-operating with him. Indeed, he is at pains to emphasise his desire to maintain the friendliest relations with Britain.

Statements that insurgent aeroplanes descend to low altitudes to identify British ships before bombing them are denied in the Note.

CANNOT GUARANTEE SAFETY.

General Franco contends that these Government ports have been converted into military storehouses, and that, in his efforts to bring the war swiftly to a conclusion, he is obliged to bomb them.

It is pointed out that the ports in question are not large, and that it is impossible to guarantee the safety of neutral shipping there when attacks are carried out.

General Franco suggests that the only practical solution is that of selecting one port remote from the war zone to which neutral shipping engaged in legitimate trade could proceed safely. The Port of Almeria is suggested as the most suitable.

The British Government has not yet had time to reach a decision on this proposal, although it is understood that preliminary consideration was given to the idea by the Cabinet at its weekly meeting on Wednesday.

Arrangements for the dispatch of an International Commission to report on the nature of the objectives bombed by the air forces operating in Spain as still held up.

FOUND IN RAIL CARRIAGE.

WOMAN WHO HAD LOST HER MEMORY

Railway police at Exchange Station, Manchester, yesterday found a middle-aged woman lying semi-conscious on the floor of a compartment of a train that had arrived from Glasgow.

She was taken to Salford Royal Hospital suffering from loss of memory.

Early to-day she recovered her memory and was able to reveal that her name was Mrs. Scott Wangle. She did not give any address or state where she was going.

A.R.P. CHIEF'S TOUR.

"NEW CHAPTER OPENING UP"

SOLID WORK DONE, HE SAYS.

Mr. Geoffrey Lloyd, Britain's A.R.P. Chief, who is now devoting practically the whole of his time to A.R.P. work, was encouraged by what he saw during his flying tour of Doncaster, Manchester and Birmingham yesterday.

Mr. Lloyd is undertaking a series of tours of industrial centres to see for himself exactly what progress has been made with A.R.P. schemes.

His tours are in no sense a visit of inspection, but are intended to foster the closest possible co-operation between the local authorities and the Home Office.

In the near future he intends to visit Yorks, Lancs, the Midlands, the N.E. Coast, Wales, the West of England and Scotland, besides seeing something of what is being done in a number of London Boroughs next week.

"I am very glad I am making this tour," Mr. Lloyd told a reporter, "because I am quite certain after what I saw yesterday that no one who stays away at headquarters in London can get a proper idea of the very great amount of solid work that is being done on A.R.P. in various parts of the country.

"It is quite clear that a new chapter is now opening in the A.R.P. movement. The plans upon which the local authorities and the Home Office have been working for many months are now coming to fruition in the shape of actual practical work."

Linen Trade Review

Yarn Buying Spurt—Lengthy "Twelfth" Holiday—Demand Continues Sluggish—Germany and Baltic Flax—Position in Ulster—Small Acreage Decline Expected—Well balanced Flax Committee—U.S. Trade Pact Delay — Interesting Report — Good "Combe Barbour" results.

(From a Special Correspondent.)

The feature this week in the Belfast linen market has been a short spurt of yarn buying initiated by Ulster weavers and merchants, whose stocks had become unduly low, and who considered this an opportune time to fill their most pressing needs. Considerable quantities of yarn changed hands, but at prices which were quite uneconomic from a replacement point of view if based on to-day's cost of raw material. A wide range of counts was involved, and many offers were turned down firmly by spinners who held out for higher prices. It is to be hoped that this buying movement will continue, but reach a more remunerative level, as spinning under present conditions is comparable to changing a shilling for eleven pence.

Production continues to be drastically curtailed in all sections of the Ulster linen industry, and spinners and manufacturers alike will take a lengthy "Twelfth" holiday this month. Many leading mills and factories will close down for three weeks on July 8, as forecast in our issue of Thursday. Unquestionably this is a wiser policy than piling up stocks and thus playing into the hands of linen buyers.

Demand for linens generally has been sluggish, and most orders are of small dimensions. Linen buyers are operating with extreme caution, and those who visited Belfast recently devoted most of their time to picking out the "plums" and searching for bargain lots rather than buying standard linens in bulk.

YARN PRICES.

Nominal Irish Linen Yarn Prices:—Sheer warps, 90's to 110's, 7s 4½d per bundle. Cambric warps 75's to 85's, 7s 4½d per bundle; 110's, 8s per bundle. Tow wefts, 25's, 9s 9d per bundle; 40's, 7s 6d per bundle. Line wefts, 40's, 8s 9d per bundle; 70's, 7s per bundle; 80's, 6s 9½d per bundle.

Should the reported negotiations between the Baltic States and Germany result in further sales of flax and tow, Ulster spinners will be virtually dependent on what stocks remain in the hands of merchants until the new crop makes its appearance. At the moment raw material prices show little change from last week's figures, with Fourth Group Slanetz at £83/84, basis 1; Ralo Tow, No. 8 at £65/66; Latvian Livonian at £67/68, basis R; Werro-Petschory Halves at £67/68, basis R; and Lithuanian Group 1 at £57/58, basis R; all per ton, c.i.f. United Kingdom. Blue Dutch is sold out, and the first supplies of new crop cannot be expected before November. Nominal values of machine-heckled water-retted tows, medium quality, are Coutrai, £60/72; Irish, £54/63; and Baltic, £52/58. Rates for Courtrai flax are slightly easier, due mainly to poor demand and scarcity of popular grades. This week the Ghent boat carried around 1,550 bales for Belfast, or about 300 bales less than last week.

In the first 26 weeks of this year, ended June 27, Belfast imported 13,546 tons flax and 4,362 tons tow as against 15,734 tons flax and 10,442 tons tow in the corresponding period of last year.

ULSTER FLAX CROP.

Reports regarding the new Ulster flax crop vary considerably in different districts, but it is generally thought that this season's area will register a slight decline to around 18,000 acres as against 19,092 acres last year. Probably it would have been a very different story if the Government flax grant had been announced earlier. Sowings were late this season owing to the drought, and many brairds were uneven and weedy because of the lack of rain in the early stages. Fortunately some seed that had remained dormant recovered with the rain, and a second braird appeared later.

The leading flax-growing counties in Northern Ireland, in order of importance, are Antrim, Derry, Down, Tyrone, and Armagh. Last year Co. Antrim had 9,335 acres under flax; Co. Derry, 4,112; Co. Down, 2,294; Co. Tyrone, 2,267, and Co. Armagh, 1,074. Co. Fermanagh, as always, was bottom of the class with a meagre 17 acres.

Occasional small lots of old crop Irish trickle into the country markets. Thus two tons changed hands in Strabane this week at from 8s to 9s per stone. This year the Irish Free State flax acreage is expected to show a slight increase, due to increased sowings in Counties Cavan and Monaghan, but it is unlikely to greatly exceed 5,000 acres. All flax grown in Eire is sold to Ulster, as there have been no flax-spinning mills in the Irish Free State since the Cork mill was dismantled in 1928, after having been idle for some years.

The decline in Irish flax growing is illustrated vividly by the fact that the constitution of the Flax Committee has been delayed some weeks through the Ulster Scutch Mill Owners' Association having ceased to exist. It was, therefore, found necessary to send nomination papers to individual scutchers in order that they might elect a member to represent their interests on the committee. All the other interested parties possessed standing organisations, which were able to nominate representatives within a few days of the announcing of the grant. The result of the poll was announced this week, Mr. William M'Collum, Coleraine, having been elected to represent scutching interests on the Flax Committee. Mr. M'Collum is president of the Ballymoney-Coleraine branch of the newly-formed "Northern Ireland Flax Mill Owners' Association," branches of which organisation are to be opened in the market towns of Ulster. It is proposed that each branch shall send one or two representatives to act on a central committee of scutch mill-owners.

COMMITTEE AND ITS TASK.

The Flax Spinners' Association—Mr. E. S. Clarke, D.L. (chairman of the Flax Spinners' Association and managing director of Island Spinning Co., Ltd.); Mr. James Gillespie (Blackstaff Flax Spinning and Weaving Co., Ltd.), and Mr. J. Houston (Linen Thread Co., Ltd.).

Scutch-Mill Owners—Mr. W. M'Collum (Coleraine).

Institute of Chartered Accountants—Mr. Herbert Quin, F.A.I.

This strong and well-balanced committee will meet shortly to prepare plans for the administration of the Northern Ireland Government's £150,000 grant to stimulate flax production in the Six Counties. A little consideration will show that their's is no easy task, as it will be hard to evolve a scheme which will please all parties. However, the possibilities are great, and it should now be possible, with the aid of this State assistance, to put the Ulster flax-growing industry on a sound and permanent footing. Hitherto Irish flax-growing has always been a peasant craft, and it will take time to mechanise it along the lines which have made flax production in Ireland as remunerative as in Belgium. Doubtless, the committee's aim will be to absolve the farmer from the troublesome tasks of pulling and retting, which work will be undertaken by central rettery companies, who will buy the flax in the field and handle harvesting, deseeding, retting, scutching, grading and marketing. For some years a combined retting and decorticating works in Co. Down has been operating successfully, somewhat on these lines, and it is significant that a new Ulster company was registered recently with the same purpose, under the style of Central Retteries, Ltd. May we hope that a new era is dawning for Irish flax culture?

SEVENTY YEARS AGO.

It is interesting to recall that some seventy years ago one witnessed the cultivation of flax upon almost every little farm throughout Ulster. During the autumn months the country seemed dotted with little smokes arising from innumerable flax kilns. At that period the flax was dried over turf fires in those kilns, and beetled with hand-beetles, or rolled in preparation for the scutching. The latter process was generally performed by girls with the aid of a flat board containing a handle, and with which they scutched the flax on an upright strong board secured to the ground by a sole, and known as a stock. Sometimes as many as 20 girls would be engaged, each with a stock and handle, at a single farm. These damsels each scutched about one stone per day of finished flax on an average. The house was known for the time being as a scutch house, and the girls' sweethearts, and all the boys for miles around, would turn up at night to sing, dance, and play games. This process of handling flax was slow, but neat, and always capable of extracting without loss, every available piece of fibre from the straw.

ANGLO-U.S.A. PACT.

Despite rumours to the contrary, it is now feared that the Anglo-United States trade negotiations, which mean so much to the Irish linen industry, may be suspended until the autumn. No limit has been set to the time that will be taken for the conclusion of the Washington talks. In official circles in London it is explained that the procedure laid down by the constitution has slowed down the negotiations. The delegation which left Britain in February was not able to begin work immediately, because the necessary inquiries were not concluded before April, and tariff discussions are necessarily protracted. One statement made from Washington is to the effect that the heat of Washington's tropical summer would be a drawback to the negotiations, though this is not a very convincing reason for the delay. If suitably clad in cool Irish linen suitings the pact-makers should be able to get an agreement clinched comfortably and without further procrastination, however tropical the summer. Joking apart, the real reason for the hitch may doubtless be found in the present trade position of the United States. The large volume of export trade enjoyed by the U.S.A. during recent months has been of great importance to her in cushioning the declines in employment and purchasing power that have resulted from the recession in domestic activity. Why, then, some Americans argue, should she open her home markets to greater competition when, without offering any concessions of note, she has increased exports to some markets by as much as 70 per cent.?

VALUABLE REPORT.

A valuable report regarding the pending trade treaty with the United Kingdom has just been issued by the Committee on Foreign Commerce and the revenue laws of the New York State Chamber of Commerce. The report points out that the re-establishment of U.S.A. foreign trade would be the greatest single factor in restoring the balance of economic life. Whereas lower wages in some cases give foreign goods an advantage, "in practice American exports appear to be able to compete with cheaper labour throughout the world," and that it should be possible for America to hold its domestic market "without excessive protective measures." "Obviously," the report continues, "unless America buys from other nations, she cannot expect to sell to them, and that a freer exchange of goods would lead to a greater employment of labour. Prominent members of the U.S.A. cotton industry have fought the proposed scaling down of linen duties on the grounds that such would lead largely to the substitution of Irish linens for American cottons. This allegation is fantastic as the consumption of linen in the United States is approximately only 5 per cent. of the consumption of cotton textiles. It has been estimated that last year the United States consumed cotton goods worth 417.5 million dollars, woollen goods worth 357.4 million dollars, rayon and artificial silk goods worth 186.9 million dollars, silk goods worth 99.7 million dollars, and linen goods worth 23.1 million dollars.

LINEN, COTTON AND PAPER.

It has been said with reason that the competitive basis between linen and cotton is about on the same basis as the competitive position between a gold watch and a silver watch, without, of course, quite as great a difference in costs or selling prices. Cotton bedsheets have since the war largely replaced linen sheets throughout the States, and both cotton and linen have met with new competition in America from both textile and non-textile rivals. Vast quantities of paper towels are now consumed in the U.S.A., and many of these are laundered and used a second time. Ingenious dish-washing machines, not to mention steam apparatus for drying the hands are also winning the favour of our mechanically-minded American cousins.

These robot rivals of the textile industry are largely the result of the domestic servant problem which has reached such an acute form overseas. Such changed conditions in modern life are largely responsible for the decreased consumption of linens. Linen stocks in the States are now at a low ebb, due to the cautious policy adopted by American buyers pending the preparation of the Trade Agreement. In the first five months of this year the U.S.A. imported United Kingdom linen piece goods to the value of only £324,806 as aganist similar imports worth £858,392 in the corresponding period of 1937. In the first quarter of this year Belfast shipments to U.S.A. of plain woven linen fabrics (under 4ozs.) totalled in value only 367,658 dollars, as against 1,497,124 dollars in the corresponding period of the previous year. Exports of fabrics over 4ozs. weight declined from 89,710 dollars to 20,424 dollars in the same period. A cheerful feature, however, has been the increasing vogue on the other side of the Atlantic for linen millinery, linen handbags, and linen footwear. Linen bonnets, incidentally, are now highly fashionable in New York, as are "informal" linen dresses for holiday wear.

POINT TO REMEMBER.

It should not be forgotten that any concession granted to linens in the proposed Anglo-American reciprocal trade agreement will be enjoyed equally by Czecho-Slovakia. Within recent years the Czechs, aided by lower wages and costs, have become formidable rivals in the U.S.A., particularly in linen dress goods and printed linens. It is significant that the Czecho-Slovak Exports Institute in Prague, which was formed four years ago, is to be granted increased financial assistance, as the present annual State grant of 5,000,000 crowns is regarded as totally inadequate. This, it is announced, should enable Czecho-Slovakian manufacturers to exploit to the utmost the export possibilities opened up by the recent Czech trade agreement with the U.S.A., in which linen featured prominently. Special importance is also attached to the preparation of the Czecho-Slovak display at the World Exhibition to be held in New York. The establishment of agencies of the Czecho-Slovak Export Institute in Brazil (Sao Paulo) and U.S.A. (Chicago) is also under consideration.

The comparative linen trade prosperity of the first seven months of 1937 is reflected in the accounts of Fairbairn Lawson Combe Barbour, Ltd., Belfast, Leeds, and Dundee, for the year ended March 31, 1938. Largest makers of flax spinning machinery in the world, the company made a trading profit of £110,909 as against £31,937 in the previous year, a substantial improvement of £78,972. Mr. J. K. Anderson, who presided at the annual meeting of the company on Wednesday, pointed out that the Falls and Wellington foundries had been well employed during the period under review, the 1937 turnover being substantially greater than for many years. A substantial volume of orders are still in hand, revealed Mr. Anderson. "Ulster flax spinners," he pointed out, "are to some extent victims of foreign competition, and in addition industrial depression in America has had a severe effect upon their output. Nevertheless, our sales in Belfast have been substantial. Our Belfast branch has kept right up-to-date with their designs, and their machinery is in substantial demand."

The total disposable profit of the company for the year totalled £79,378. Accordingly, the directors have sanctioned the payment of a further 2 per cent. interest (making the full 5 per cent.) on £300,000 mortgage Debenture stock, amounting to £6,000, and the payment of a dividend at the rate of 10 per cent. on redeemable First Preference shares, amounting to £12,849, also setting aside to a contingency reserve fund £12,000. The sum of £50,071 is carried forward to next year's accounts. It will be recalled that in December, 1936, the capital of the company was reorganised, and this is the first payment on the 10 per cent. redeemable First Preference shares created under the scheme.

The company owns Falls Foundry, Belfast; Wellington Foundry, Leeds, and all shares of Urquhart Lindsay and Robert Orchar, Ltd., and Charles Parker, Sons and Co., Ltd., Dundee. The Urquhart Lindsay branch are leading makers of linen finishing machinery, particularly hydraulic mangles and heavy calenders. The total issued share capital of Fairbairn Lawson Combe Barbour, Ltd., is £242,153, including 300,000 shilling Preferred Ordinary shares and 988,565 shilling Ordinary shares.

Belfast's two other leading flax machinist firms are private companies, and therefore their trading results are not disclosed. It is general knowledge, however, that they had a good year in 1937. Flax spinners throughout the world come to Belfast for their machinery.

DEEPEST IN WORLD.

NORWEGIAN TALKS OF THRILLS.

Small boys and others who dig holes in the ground will share some of the excitement of O. K. Skavaas, a 29-year-old Norwegian, who says he has made the deepest hole in the world. They will not share all his excitement.

"I've shot a 9-foot lion in South Africa and watched a native burn his wife on a funeral pyre, but there wasn't the same thrill as in driving that hole," he observed when he arrived at Vancouver.

The hole was 11,000 feet deep. He dug it with a diamond drill on the Rand, and it is only an inch and a quarter wide. Yet doing it was more stirring than observing the fate of the Indian woman who travelled to Tanganyika to marry, quarreled with her husband-to-be, was murdered, and committed to a pyre!

WORLD UNEMPLOYMENT GROWS.

Provisional statistics showing unemployment in the world in the second quarter of this year, compiled by the International Labour Office at Geneva, show that compared with the corresponding quarter of 1937 unemployment has increased in nine countries—The U.S., Canada, Belgium, the United Kingdom, Eire, Denmark, Bulgaria, and Norway.

Compared with the previous quarter of this year, however, worklessness has declined in all except the first three of these countries. Blackest figures of all were those for the United States, where in the second quarter there were 11,129,107 unemployed, 2,816,279 more than in the corresponding quarter of 1937, and 156,107 more than in the previous quarter this year.

QUICK WORK IN THAT COURT.

Believed to be the quickest "Offence-Summons-Trial" sequence in history is the case of Anton Strand, who is now on remand at Vancouver.

Strand was sitting in one of the front benches of Magistrate H. S. Woods' court waiting to appear on a charge of retaining stolen property, when a constable saw him spit on the floor of the court.

The constable reported the offence, the clerk typed out a summons, Strand was charged, and in a matter of a few seconds he was in the cells, remanded for one week. If he isn't sentenced on the major charge he will be on the lesser.

3 STONE 10 DAUGHTER BORN.

A daughter weighing 3st. 10lb. has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Chunky.

The fact is not really remarkable, for Mrs. Rosie Chunky herself weighs 21st. 4lbs., and Mr. Chunky weighs over two tons.

The Chunkys are the hippopotami at the Central Park Zoo, New York. Rosie is 14 years old and was bought by the Zoo authorities eight years ago when Chunky's first wife, "Mrs. Murphy" died. Chunky is ten years old.

Both mother and daughter are doing well, and the new baby will soon be on view to the public.

POISONS HIMSELF AND PATIENT.

A doctor who made a mistake in a prescription has poisoned himself as well as his patient at Burgas, on the Black Sea.

Yanaki Gheorghieff, a wealthy farmer, was treated by his family doctor for an illness, and was given a prescription for some pills. He had this made up at the local chemist.

After taking one of the pills he became worse, and suffered intense internal pains. He suggested to the doctor that he had made a mistake, and to prove this suspicion was unfounded the doctor himself swallowed a pill.

Soon after the doctor became seriously ill, and also suffered pains. The patient has since died, and the doctor is now in hospital in a grave condition.—Reuter.

PILE OF BONES MYSTERY.

A pile of human bones has created the mystery of the goldfields of Northern Ontario. It is believed that the relics are those of an unknown prospector who was the first of his kind to penetrate into the goldfields.

News of the discovery has reached the Ontario Department of Mines in a letter from Mr. J. A. Claremont, Master of Titles at Cochrane (Ontario).

A trapper found bones, a steel rod, an iron box, and another box containing rocks on the shores of a lake. He brought to Cochrane an ankle bone, 45lbs. of the rock, the rod and the iron box.

This is six inches long, four inches wide, and one inch deep. In its cover is set a strong magnifying glass, and it has handles of silver or pewter.

Mr. John Work, of the Ontario Department of Mines, said in an interview that he believed it would be possible to trace the dead man's identity through the box. "From its description it sounds like equipment used by geologists of the Hudson's Bay Company more than 50 years ago."—Reuter.

GERMAN CONSCRIPT LABOUR

METHOD OF SELECTION DECIDED.

BERLIN, Friday.—Detailed regulations for the execution of the Labour Conscription Decree issued a week ago by Field-Marshal Goering, the Commissioner for the Four Years Plan, are published to-day (wires the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" correspondent).

They provide that managers of businesses shall report to the local branch of the Labour Office their requirements in personnel for work classified under the four years plan as "important and urgent." The Labour Office will then pass on the application to headquarters, which will select, under the power granted by Field-Marshal Goering's decree, the requisite number of persons adjudged capable of filling the posts. Railway fares to the works will be paid by the local Labour Office and the return fare will be borne by the firm.

The exact method by which the selection will be made is not yet divulged, though it is stated that married employes will not in the first place be called up. If, however, this is done a special allowance will be made. The conditions of the new employment must be at least as favourable as those of the old, but the new contract cannot be prematurely dissolved without a special dispensation from the Labour Office, which overrules any right to institute legal proceedings.

"DYING WISH" WILL STORY.

DOCUMENT UNDER CARPET.

JUDGE AND "GRAVEST SUSPICION."

A story of how a document purporting to be a will was said to have been found under a stair carpet, was viewed with "gravest suspicion" by Lord Jamieson in the Court of Session at Edinburgh on Friday.

Lord Jamieson gave judgment in a case over an alleged will of the late Mrs. Esther Small Ross, of Lockwood, Bearsden, who died on December 28, 1936, leaving estate of £8,244.

The disputed document ran—"To my niece, Lily M'Intyre, I leave all I posses. This is my dying wish.—Esther Ross."

The proceedings were brought by Glasgow Corporation against Miss Lily M'Intyre, of Ailsa Drive, Glasgow, and others, for a declaration that the document in question was not the genuine writing or holograph of Mrs. Ross. The plaintiffs also sought to have it declared that the succession to Mrs. Ross's estate fell to be regulated by her holograph will of January 11, 1927.

The action was defended by Miss Lily M'Intyre, who conducted her own case.

Lord Jamieson granted a decree in favour of the Corporation, and said that so far from Miss M'Intyre having discharged the onus of proving that the document propounded by her was the holograph of Mrs. Ross there was overwhelming proof that it was not so. His Lordship said that by the 1927 will Mrs. Ross left certain legacies, and the residue was to be paid over to the Parish Council of Glasgow.

"INTEREST TO POOREST OF POOR."

The will added—"The interest to be paid out each year to the poorest of the poor."

The Corporation, as the successors of the Parish Council, sued as residuary legatees.

In the course of his judgment Lord Jamieson pointed out that after Mrs. Ross's death Miss M'Intyre urged that there must be a will later than 1927, and that a proper search of the house would probably lead to such a discovery. A search was made.

Mrs. M'Intyre, mother of Miss Lily M'Intyre, and Miss Margaret M'Intyre, her sister were at the house when, in the course of the search, Mrs. Margaret M'Intyre purported to find under the stair carpet a folder having within it a photograph of Mrs. Ross, and containing a snapshot of her with "To Lily" written on the back, together with the document already quoted.

At the time when the discovery was made, said Lord Jamieson, there was no one in the immediate proximity of Miss Margaret M'Intyre. "There is evidence which throws the gravest suspicion on the story. I think it is proved that Mrs. Ross was physically incapable of going down half a dozen steps of that stair, much less a dozen as Mrs. M'Intyre suggests, placing the folder under the stair carpet and returning to her room. The suggestion that she was in the habit of secreting documents in unlikely places is proved to be entirely without foundation."

Dr. Royce's Sermon Before King William

LETTER FROM MR. S. SHANNON MILLIN

Sir,—In your issue of 25th ult. Mr. Robert Ritchie resumed the important historical question as to date and place of Dr. Royce's Sermon preached in Belfast, during King William's visit in June, 1690. Where the statements on both these points are so conflicting it is necessary, for obtaining a proper determination, to have recourse to a weighing of evidence. On the one hand, there is the date, "the 14th day of June, 1690" (being Saturday, the day of the King's arrival) appearing on the official copy, "printed by the King's Special Command"; and, on the other hand, there is Story's version, "next day the King heard a Sermon preached by Dr. Royce" (which fixes the date as Sunday, 15th June). Notwithstanding that Story describes himself as "An Eye Witness to the Most Remarkable Passages," which may or may not include a Sermon, one would naturally, as I have already done, decide in favour of the "official copy" and fix the date as Saturday, the 14th day of June. But fortunately, in the interests of historical accuracy, there is an important piece of evidence, hitherto unknown to me, which fixes beyond doubt that the Sermon was preached on Sunday morning, 15th June, 1690, in the Belfast Castle, and not in the Corporation Church, now St. Georges.

The aforesaid evidence is contained in a letter from Sir Robert Southwell, who accompanied King William to Ireland as Secretary of State for Ireland, which position he held till his death in 1702. In a letter, written from Belfast and dated 15th June, 1690, to Lord Nottingham, Secretary of State in the first administration of William and Mary, Southwell says:—

> "This morning his Majesty, having many things to settle, could not go to the publick church, but was attended by a full congregation at his own quarters, where Mr. Royce, one of his chaplains recommended by the Dean of St. Paul's, opened the campagne by a most eloquent sermon and a very suitable text—'By Faith he subdued Kingdoms.'"

Of that statement there cannot be the slightest doubt, written, as it was, by an official to one high in command; and, unlike the other two statements, the date of the letter is confirmed by the words—"this morning." Those words could not, by any possibility, refer to Saturday 14th, as the King did not arrive at Belfast Castle until late in the afternoon of that day.

BELFAST ADDRESS TO THE KING.

That important piece of historical information was copied by the Rev. Otway Woodward, Newcastle, Co. Down, from documents in the Public Record Office, Dublin, and their contents preserved, while the originals were destroyed during the Rebellion in June, 1922. I take this opportunity to express, not only my personal thanks, but those of all students of history, to Mr. Woodward for thus preserving a valuable piece of Belfast history, and for his further valuable service in preserving the words of the Belfast Address which the Sovereign of Belfast, on bended knee in the present Hammond's Court, presented to the King.

"To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.
The humble and unanimous Addresse of the Soveraigne,
Burgesses, and Inhabitants of the Corporation of Belfast.
June 12, 1690.

"We, your Majesties' dutifull and obedient subjects of this Corporation, having in most humble manner offered up our publique Prayers and Thanksgiving to Almighty God for your sacred Majesties' and Royall Consorts' happy Accession to the Crown and Government of these Kingdoms; do now, upon this joyful occasion of your Majesties' happy arrivall in this Kingdom, and at this Port, with all sincerity present our most humble and hearty Congratulations, beseeching Almighty God so to prosper and favour with success your Majesties' Arms by Sea and Land, that all favourers of Popery and Slavery, and Enemies of your Majesties' Government may be defeated and suppressed, and the true Protestant Religion, our Laws and Liberties may be on the surest foundations confirmed and established, which we shall always gratefully acknowledg as the Blessing of God upon your Majesties' indefatigable care and industry for the preservation of all that's sacred and dear to us."

"And as we were the first in this Kingdom who gave demonstration of our zeal and affection for your Majesties' Government; so shall we ever continue to serve your Majesty with our lives and fortunes; and that God may bless your Majesty and Royall Consort with a long and prosperous Reign, attended with all the blessings of this life and with an Eternal Crown of Glory in the life to come is the most fervent and sincere Prayer of

ROBT. LEATHES,
Soveraigne."

BORE 77 SIGNATURES.

Then follow the signatures of seventy-seven inhabitants and Burgesses of Belfast.

It will be noticed that the Address is dated 12th June, although not presented till 14th. The time of the King's arrival was very uncertain owing to stress of weather after leaving Hoylake on 11th, and apparently the Corporation was determined to be ready. It was also, apparently, anticipated that the King would sail to Belfast, from the words "arrival at this Port," but this was prevented by the state of the tide.—Yours, &c.,

S. SHANNON MILLIN,
Harpenden,
1st July, 1938.

FIRST ESSAY IN PRESS DEBATE.

Sir,—As a reader of the "Telegraph" at home and abroad over a period of 25 years I have yet to enter Press debate and would claim favour in this respect. My reply is not to "Hopeful" but to his critics. It is useless to discuss a national subject with a person who has apparently a very remote knowledge of English or Irish history. His vapourings are the effect of a very distorted brain. A man who fails to obey the laws of any State that becomes his place of residence and affords him its protection lacks the respect or social recognition of his fellows. Eventually he and his kind will become extinct. Why try to make a silk purse from a sow's ear?—Yours, etc.,

"ENGLISHMAN."

ADVISED TO VISIT ENGLAND.

Sir,—Your correspondent "Hopeful" appears to be one of those individuals who is content to rely upon what he hears rather than get at the facts. A stay in England would do him a power of good and perhaps change his opinion. He would find that the Englishman does not look upon the Irishman as a foreigner but rather as a comrade and an essential part of our great Empire. He is therefore surprised, and somewhat disgusted, at the attitude of distrust and hatred adopted by "Hopeful" and his like.

"Hopeful's" taunt, that the Englishman's courage is to be found only in books would, I think, tend to amuse the Englishman rather than distress him, especially as the remarks come from one who hasn't even the courage to write over his own signature.—Yours, etc.,

J. W. PRING.

"THE ONLY WAY."

Sir,—The trouble with the Irish is that once they get an idea into their thick skulls, it is almost impossible to remove it. Whether the idea is right or wrong does not matter, for the Irishman will not admit he is wrong. In this way the problem of the Border has arisen. The man of Ulster pulls for George VI., while the man of Eire pulls for De Valera; and we get nothing but murders and acts of violence. People argue that it is the difference of religion which is the cause of it all. But surely there is no religion in hating your neighbour. In England and Scotland Roman Catholic and Protestant can live side by side without strife. Why not in Ireland? To sum it all up, the only way we can have peace in Ireland is when we join together and form a United Ireland under the Union Jack. For surely if George VI. can rule over a whole Empire he can rule over the few hundred square miles of Ireland.—Yours, etc.,

S. H. W.

GLAD BUT ALSO SAD.

Sir,—I am glad to see that the Presbyterian Church has given its support to Dr. Hyde as the first President of Southern Ireland. Ulster people should be pleased that this grand old man has been elected to fill so important a post. It is regrettable that Southerners should continue to foster a religion with its headquarters in Rome, and that their hard-earned monies should be sent to a foreign country via the Church to be used at some time as a weapon against themselves. I cannot understand how the idea came into the minds of these simple people that they are the true Irish and that we in the North are the "invaders" when the reverse is nearer the truth. If we delve into history it will be found that the Southerner is a mixture of French, Spanish, and other Continental races and that the Northerner is mainly of Scottish descent.

To go back a little further it will be found that Ireland was once known as Scotia (or Scotialand) and that Scotland was called Pictland. The egress of our people from the North to Pictland has a direct bearing on the change of that country's name from Pictland to Scotland, yet when these people (Scotians) returned to their native land, now Ulster, they were called foreigners by the offspring of the Latin settlers. The meaning of the term "more Irish than the 'Irish' themselves" refers to the return of the Scotian to his native soil. My advice to the South is, give up Romanism and try to "act" as true Irishmen, at peace with their fellows and their neighbours in the sister island.

Out of a population of approximately forty-eight million people in these islands there are six million Roman Catholics and forty-two million Protestants.—Yours, etc.,

"ROMAC."

DE VALERA AND THE OATH.

Sir,—Your correspondent "Mullinavat" apparently belongs to that small group (rapidly growing smaller) of Irishmen who take very little interest in the progress and achievements in our present day Ireland. In his letter in your issue June 30, he "enlightens" us by saying that De Valera and his Government have taken the Oath of Allegiance to the King. What did "Mullinavat" expect De Valera to do, rant for the rest of his life on a soap box rather than take the Oath of Allegiance. The reason he was elected was that the main thing on his programme was the abolition of the Oath.

In the old days under England's rule (misrule would be more appropriate) anyone daring to have proposed its removal would have been put in jail. But at least "Dev" had that measure of freedom and because he was a true son of Ireland, he did the only thing that was left open for him to do, he took the Oath of Allegiance, under pressure certainly, but he never recognised anyone as King of Ireland by word or deed. The same applies to his government.

Ireland after the abdication recognised King George VI. as the new King of England. England, after the new constitution had been passed in Ireland, recognised Dr. Hyde as the supreme head of the Irish people. By making a trade agreement with De Valera as head of the new state Eire, they made official their acceptance. After centuries of degradation under England's misrule, Ireland has at last decided to fight England with her own weapon—Compromise.

When Ulster decides to go in with the Free State, she will at least obtain representatives who will fight to improve her condition in every way, and who will take a pride in helping fellow Irishmen out of the pit of abject slavery and poverty which has been Ulster's lot, especially in the last 17 years. The sooner "Mullinavat" awakes to the fact that Irishmen can now look after themselves better than anyone else, the better for Ulster—Yours, etc. "AWAKE"

LATEST 'PLANES AND DEVICES.

WASHINGTON, Friday.—What is believed to be one of the biggest purchases of aircraft in the history of the United States Army was made to-day, when the War Department awarded contracts worth over 14 million dollars (about £2,800,000) for 98 aeroplanes and a large supply of Air Corps equipment.

The contracts include 13 additional "Flying Fortress" 'planes, which will give the United States a total of 52 of these huge bombers.

Of the 98 machines ordered, 91 are bombers, the other seven being fighters of a new type.

The Acting-Secretary of War, Mr. Louis Johnston, stated that the contracts marked the culmination of a year of intensified effort towards the objective set by the Board headed by Mr. Newton D. Baker, which was to procure 2,320 modern first-line aircraft by July 1, 1940.

He said that in the fiscal year ending yesterday, contracts were placed for 588 machines, including 236 pursuit 'planes and 118 bombers.

"These ships are equal, if not superior, to like types in any part of the world. They clearly establish the fact that the United States is not lagging behind other nations in aeronautical equipment, but on the other hand has assumed, and will maintain, its position in the forefront of aviation," Mr. Johnston declared.—Reuter.

REPUDIATING THE KING.

"ENGLISH CHURCHMAN'S" COMMENT.

The "English Churchman" has the following comment in this week's issue: "The top stone of Irish disloyalty was placed in position in Dublin on Saturday when Dr. Hyde was ceremonially installed as "President" of that part of Ireland which has renounced its allegiance to our King and set itself up as a sovereign, independent State. Addressing the new President, Mr. De Valera said: 'You are now our President, our head, freely chosen under our own laws, inheriting the authority and entitled to the respect which the Gaels ever gave to those whom they recognised to be their rightful chiefs, but which for centuries they denied to those whom a foreign law would enforce upon them.' Thus the sovereignty of King George is repudiated, as it was in the Constitution by virtue of which Dr. Hyde supplants the King's representative, a Constitution which has never been specifically endorsed by the British Parliament. It is to this new and subversive allegiance that De Valera invites the assent and co-operation of Ulster. It is a strange infatuation!

OBJECT TO BRITISH RED ENSIGN

CROWN ABOVE THE HARP.

QUEENSTOWN COUNCIL DEBATE.

The flying of the British red ensign at the flagstaff of the Royal Cork Yacht Club in Queenstown was a matter of discussion at Queenstown Urban Council's monthly meeting on Friday night.

When the ordinary business of the Council had been disposed of the Chairman (Mr. Seamus Fitzgerald), former De Valeraite member of the Dail and Free State Senate, said there was to be a change of flags at the forts, now what about a change of flags at the Royal Cork Yacht Club. The flag of the State was the tricolour, not the red ensign. He did not know what was the position of the Yacht Club, which also flew the crown above the harp on its other flag.

Mr. M'Grath—The whole town has been watching for this. I propose that we request the club to take down the flag on July 11 and not put it up again.

Mr. Barry—I cannot understand how they disrespect the national emblem so much. There are certain parts where it would be very unpopular to fly the Union Jack, and I am surprised that nothing has been done about it before this.

Mr. Love said the flag with the crown and harp was the burgee of the club, and a burgee was to a club its very life blood.

The Chairman—I suggest that the Town Clerk should make inquiries into the position and report back to us on this night week.

Mr. M'Grath—The day after the taking over of the forts in Cork is July 12 of historic memory for the Battle of the Boyne, and our friends in the North will duly celebrate it in a manner that is by no means uncertain. In taking over the forts there is no unknown soldier's grave and no weeping widow, but it is the blood of the men culminating in acts of superior statesmanship which has brought about this victory. I think we are not appreciating this in the manner in which we should since it is the thing we have wanted for the past 700 years. Only last week I saw in the newspapers that Catholic national school children were stoned in Belfast. I second the suggestion of the chairman.

The Town Clerk—I will ask the law adviser about the matter.

The Chairman—I think that we should also call upon the people of the town to display bunting on July 11.

Mr. Barry—What about asking the Administrator to make some announcement?

The Chairman—Something could be done about it in the schools anyway.

VICTORIA COPPER COINS.

CALL FOR WITHDRAWAL.

MINT OFFICIALS MAKING EFFORT.

All copper coins bearing the uncrowned effigy of Queen Victoria, are to be withdrawn from circulation.

So announced the officials of the Royal Mint, who are becoming perturbed at the slow rate at which worn bronze coins are returning to them.

They are to make a determined effort to have the return of such coins accelerated.

With a view to this they have asked for the co-operation of the G.P.O., and in future all copper coins received at post offices throughout Great Britain and Ulster are to be examined, and the worn ones withdrawn for return to the Mint.

An arrangement has also been effected with head and branch banks in London and the provinces, that ten shilling packets of worn bronze coins will be accepted by the Post Office in exchange for currency notes of the same value.

Any coin tendered specifically as worn bronze, or of the uncrowned Queen Victoria issue by any member of the general public will be exchanged by the Post Office for a coin of more recent date.

The consignments of such coins from the provinces to the Royal Mint are to be sent by goods train in the ordinary way and not insured.

WHAT FILM SHOWS.

LOUIS-SCHMELING BOUT.

GERMAN WAS OVERWHELMED.

The defeat in 124 seconds of Max Schmeling by Joe Louis in New York last week as revealed in a slow-motion film privately shown yesterday in London was completely overwhelming, states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" boxing correspondent. The "foul punch" protest of Schmeling's manager about a punch in the kidneys is ridiculous.

Schmeling was beaten from the time the boxers met in the centre of the ring. He seemed paralysed by a sense of caution. He had no footwork, and made only one attempt to strike a blow—a half-hearted right to the head.

All that Louis had to do was to walk in and hit. He did this efficiently, using upward hooks with both hands. After a minute Schmeling, on the ropes, was so badly battered that he would have fallen but for the fact that he clung to the top rope.

The referee eventually pushed Louis away and enabled Schmeling to stagger out into the ring. A right smash landed for the first of the three knock-downs.

HOPELESSLY BEATEN.

It is true that just before that punch Louis aimed a blow round Schmeling's left elbow towards the kidneys, but it was the sort of punch one sees a dozen times or more in every fight. In any event, Schmeling was then hopelessly beaten. For Louis the fight was no test at all.

Schmeling has always been a notoriously slow starter, but, there was no excuse for his collapse so early in the fight. He seemed to have no idea how to defend himself, and stood rooted while Louis hit him. He must have known that against a close-quarters boxer like Louis use of the ring is essential.

Schmeling, who has remained in bed in hospital since his defeat, will be carried aboard the Bremen on a stretcher to-day on his return to Germany. He is still in considerable pain. His back and waist are encased in adhesive tape.

CALIFORNIA WANTS JURICH.

Jackie Jurich, of California, who was beaten in an overweight match with Benny Lynch at Paisley, has received offers from American promoters to return home. Although he has not been notified officially by any of the State Commissions, Mr. Johnny Rogers, Jurich's manager, told a Press Association reporter that he was certain that his boxer's claim for the world flyweight title would be recognised.

"We have had an offer to go back immediately to California and fight," said Mr. Rogers. "The promoters there are declaring Jurich the world champion. At the moment Jackie is having a holiday. He deserves one after tackling a man nearly half a stone heavier and being let down after travelling 7,000 miles to fight for the world title."

In the meantime Rogers is considering fights for the American in the Provinces and London, and has made no decision regarding his return to America.

PALMER-BRADY FIGHT.

The referee in the Southern Area bantamweight fight between Pat Palmer (holder) and Jim Brady at Dundee on July 6, will be Jack Hart, of London.

The steward will be appointed by the Scottish Area Council.

FRIDAY'S RETURNS AT CELTIC.

CLUGGIN CROSS SURPRISES.

SLIGHTLY POTTY'S UNLUCKY FALL.

The surprise of the meeting at Celtic last night was the forward running of Cluggin Cross in the Harmonican Stakes, which the Southerner won with a margin of eight lengths in 31.79secs.

This was an immense improvement on his only previous appearance on the track a week ago. On that occasion the visitor had finished a very bad third, beaten seven lengths and a distance.

There was no question about his superiority in last night's race, for, breaking in front, he simply cantered away from his field, which included the unhappy Slightly Potty, who came a nasty cropper on the first turn.

MAN CERTIFIED AS "DEAD."

COMMONS HEARS OF MISTAKE.

A landlady seeing her lodger, who had been ill, lying motionless in bed believed he had died and made arrangements for his funeral while in fact he was alive, it was stated in the House of Commons yesterday.

Mr. Elliott, Minister of Health, in a written reply to Colonel Burton (Con., Sudbury) stated—"Mrs. Martha Brabben, landlady of Mr. James A. Douthitt, of Hamilton Street, Camden Town, London, in the belief that he had died, informed Mr. Douthitt's medical attendant, who, being acquainted with Mr. Douthitt's medical condition, issued a certificate of cause of death."

The Registrar duly registered the death because Mrs. Brabben was a fully qualified informant as "the occupier" of the house. Mr. Douthitt proved to be alive when Mrs. Brabben returned home.

CLERK FOUND DYING.

DECLINED TO ACCEPT CHARITY.

Said to have been too proud to accept charity, Victor Millevoi (41), a former bank clerk, was found dying at his lodgings in Glenloch Road, Hampstead.

It was stated at the London inquest on Friday, that death was probably due to narcotic poisoning, and the inquest was adjourned until July 21 in order to ascertain the actual cause of death.

Mr. Pietro Bordoni, of Temple Gardens, London, a bank clerk, said that Millevoi, who was a British subject, had been discharged with about 50 colleagues from the London branch of an Italian bank in 1936, "partly owing to the political situation at the time." He had since had difficulty in getting employment.

The Deputy Coroner (Mr. W. R. Heddy)—He was a man who seemed to have been very proud in not accepting charity?—You could not help him in any way.

Mr. Heddy said that Millevoi had left a number of letters referring to his efforts to obtain employment.

"He seems," he added, "to have had friends who did a good deal for him, but he was the kind of man who did not like to accept charity."

SON-IN-LAW ASKED LOAN.

TO BURY HIS MOTHER.

A son-in-law who was loaned £8 to meet the funeral expenses of his own mother pleaded the statute of limitations in a claim for money lent brought against him by his father-in-law in the King's Bench Division, London.

Mr. Milford Ayrton Wadsworth, of Kenton Gardens, Kenton, Middlesex, sought to recover from his son-in-law, Mr. Cecil Augustus Fleming, of Tangiers Road, Copnor, Portsmouth, £138, which, he said, he lent him in various sums between 1931 and 1935.

Remarking "Some men have a sense of honour which prevents them pleading the statute of limitations; some have none," Mr. Justice Hilbery entered judgment for Mr. Wadsworth for £38, with High Court costs.

Mr. Fleming, who said his father-in-law came to the rescue when he met with misfortune, admitted having received the money, but pleaded that £100 advanced by reason of the statute of limitations because liability had not been enforced within six years.

On behalf of Mr. Wadsworth it was argued that when in 1933 he advanced £30 to his son-in-law in consideration of his repaying the £100 as soon as he was able, that constituted a new contract which entitled him to recover.

"I cannot give effect to the argument put forward on behalf of Mr. Wadsworth, much as I might desire," said Mr. Justice Hilbery. "No court in such circumstances like to give effect to the statute of limitations, and I can scarcely think of circumstances where to plead the statute could be less attractive than those in this case."

DUNCAIRN-CLIFTON UNIONISTS.

The members of J polling district of the Duncairn - Clifton (Belfast) Unionist Association held their annual excursion to Portrush, which was reached by train.

Tea was supplied in the Arcadia Cafe, and the party enjoyed the latter part of the evening on the sands, with the sun shining, and the sea air very bracing and pleasant.

Racing and games were arranged when prizes were won by the following competitors:—Mrs. Halliday, Mrs. Meneilly, Mrs. Connor, Mrs. Currie, Mrs. M'Callum, Mrs. Totten, Mrs. M'Clean, and the children, Madge Totten, L. Stewart, M. Kyle, W. Meneilly, W. Murphy.

The arrangements, which proved most satisfactory, were carried through by the hon. secretary, Mrs. Wallwork, and treasurer, Mrs. Humphreys, to whom a hearty vote of thanks was passed.

PROGRESS OF BOWLS.

SECOND GREEN FOR BANGOR

OPENED BY PRIME MINISTER

BEFORE A LARGE ATTENDANCE.

In brilliant weather last evening, Ward Park, Bangor, which was gaily decorated with flags and streamers, made a perfect setting for the inauguration of the new bowling green. Many visitors and residents, with representatives of the various bowling clubs, were in attendance, and the scene when Lord Craigavon, the Prime Minister, arrived and was received with much enthusiasm, was one long to be remembered in this favourite watering-place.

The Prime Minister, who looked in better health than for some time, was welcomed at the pavilion by the Mayor of Bangor, Alderman Dr. R. M. Bowman, who introduced members of the Borough Council and the principal guests.

It was a high honour to the bowlers of Bangor, said the Mayor, addressing the assemblage round the new green, that Lord Craigavon should come to take part in that ceremony, and the more so because Lady Craigavon accompanied him. Lord Craigavon's time, they knew, was fully occupied by his many important duties, but as they looked on him in Bangor, not only as their Prime Minister, but as their representative, they greatly appreciated the kind way in which he appeared at functions in the town as often as he could. He rarely disappointed the people of Bangor.

The Mayor then called on the Prime Minister to officially declare the green open for play.

PLACE OF HAPPY MEMORIES.

Lord Craigavon, who was greeted with applause, said it was a great delight to him to take part in the opening ceremony. He had many happy recollections of his early days in Bangor, and to return at any time gave him infinite pleasure. He had seen, he said, some of the best bowlers in the world, even as far away as New Zealand, where they took a great interest in the game, and it gave him added pleasure to know that "the fairy godfather" of bowls in Ulster was with them that evening. Major William Baird, D.L., had a world-wide reputation for his interest in the game.

The Prime Minister congratulated the Borough on this latest extension of the amenities for visitors and residents, and expressed the hope that Bangor would have a prosperous tourist season.

Lord Craigavon then threw the first jack, and the first bowl was delivered by the Mayor. The Prime Minister was loudly cheered when he delivered the second bowl, which beat the Mayor's throw.

Councillor Lieut.-Col. Porter, proposing a vote of thanks to Lord Craigavon, said they all knew how the Prime Minister spent his time working for the good of the Province, and deeply appreciated his coming there that evening.

Councillor Porter presented a silver statuette to Lord Craigavon as a memento of the occasion.

Councillor Walter Malcolm, J.P., seconding the vote of thanks to the Prime Minister, said they were proud to have him as their representative, and on numerous occasions he had demonstrated that he was proud to represent them.

The Mayor conveyed the vote of thanks, which was carried with applause and prolonged cheering.

VOTE OF THANKS TO MAYOR.

In the pavilion, where the party was entertained by the Mayor, Major William Baird, D.L., chairman of the Irish Bowling Association, proposed a vote of thanks to Dr. Bowman for his hospitality.

It had been a pleasant function, said Major Baird, and they were all delighted to see their Prime Minister looking so well. He was no stranger to the bowling world. Four years ago he had come forward and helped them to receive bowlers from England, Wales and Scotland, when they came to Belfast for the international match. Lord Craigavon had asked him to throw the second bowl, but it would have been presumptious on his part as he didn't want to outshine the Prime Minister. (Laughter).

Some years ago, continued Major Baird, only three seaside resorts in Ulster were equipped with bowling greens—Larne, Bangor and Portrush—but now, he was glad to say, there were also greens at Newcastle, Ballycastle, Whitehead, and a new one at Donaghadee would soon be opened.

Major Baird congratulated Bangor Borough Council on their progress in establishing this additional green, and said that what they had done would be an asset not only to Bangor but also to the North of Ireland.

BANGOR'S SENIOR BOWLERS.

Mr. Isaac Walker, the oldest bowler in Bangor, seconded the vote of thanks to the Mayor, who, he said, had always been a good friend of the Bangor Club and a former member.

The vote of thanks was passed by hearty applause, followed by the singing of "For he's a jolly good fellow."

Replying, Dr. Bowman said he had no idea he would have such a reception, and his only regret was that he hadn't been able to do more.

The Mayor announced that Maxwell M. Harte, Ltd., Glasgow, who laid the new green, had sent a subscription of £3 3s for Bangor Hospital. Sir Thomas M'Mullan, chairman of the Hospital Committee, expressed thanks.

During the evening selections were rendered by the band of the 1st Batt. the East Lancashire Regiment, under the conductorship of Mr. J. H. Dought.

Following the opening ceremony representatives of the N.I.A.B.A. played members of the Bangor and North Down Clubs in a keenly contested match.

I.B.A. SENIOR CUP.

In the I.B.A. Senior Cup Forth River beat Ballymena by 108-51.

Forth River—W. J. Baird, 31; J. Cummings, 31; J. Ross, 21; H. Russell, 25.

Ballymena—T. G. Alexander, 12; R. M'Kane, 8; J. K. Neave, 21; S. J. M'Connell, 10.

N.I.B.A. SENIOR LEAGUE.

Alexandra v. Woodvale. Played at Alexandra Park on Thursday evening, June 30, and resulted in a victory for Woodvale by 12 shots. Score:—84-72.

WOMEN BOWLS PLAYERS.

SCOTS WOMEN AGAIN WIN.

Scotland defeated Wales by 133 shots to 101 to retain the Eve Trophy in the Women's Bowls International, which concluded at Llandrindod Wells on Friday.

BELFAST BIGAMY CHARGE.

TWO FOR TRIAL AT COMMISSION.

A young man and woman were at Belfast Custody Court to-day returned for trial to the City Commission, bail being allowed.

They were Marion Bryson, alias Maria M'Kenna, Ardoyne Village, who was charged with marrying Samuel M'Donald Stringer, Ardglen Drive, her husband, Angus Bryson, being then alive. Stringer was charged with aiding and abetting her in committing a felony.

Detective-Sergeant W. J. Elliott said Bryson, when cautioned, said: "I admit I done it." Stringer said: "I admit I got married to her, and I knew her husband was alive."

HOCKEY TOURISTS IN N. ZEALAND.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Saturday.—The British team of women hockey players now touring New Zealand beat Eastern Southland by 2-1.

FOOTBALL AT BESSBROOK.

CHINESE FIGHTING

AT SCENE OF WAR'S FIRST SHOTS.

AS ANNIVERSARY NEARS.

GUERILLAS SHOW MUCH ACTIVITY.

PEKING, Saturday. — With the approach of the first anniversary of the outbreak of hostilities in China, the Japanese find themselves battling within a few miles of Lukouchiao, the little township near Peking, where the first shots were fired on July 7 last.

Chinese guerillas are active in the hills just west of Lukouchiao, while fighting is going on between guerillas and Japanese forces in Nankow Pass, about 25 miles north-west of Peking, which was the scene of a fierce engagement last August.

The Japanese authorities estimate that in the three Provinces of Hopei, Shantung, and Shansi, some 250,000 "bandits" —their term for guerillas—are at large.

JAPANESE PENETRATE BOOM.

A Hankow telegram says:—Heavy Chinese reinforcements have been dispatched to the Matang area, about 200 miles east of Hankow, in a endeavour to stem the Japanese advance up the Yangtse River.

The Japanese now control the fortifications dominating the southern end of the Matang boom, which has been holding up the progress of their warships for several weeks.

Japanese motor-boats were reported to-day to have penetrated the boom, but the Chinese have laid down another at Hukow, 20 miles below Kiukiang.

GOSSIP FROM PRESS.

ART OF THE SONG-WRITER.

HUNTLEY TREVOR'S METHOD.

LONDON, Saturday.

It is not necessary to understand music to be a successful popular song writer. Irving Berlin hardly knew a note of music when he wrote songs which started rag-time craze. Huntley Trevor, one of Britain's most successful song writers, responsible for hundreds of songs, including "You Can't Do that There 'Ere," "Give Yourself a Pat on the Back," "Jolly Good Company," "Old Father Thames," and his latest, "Merrilly We Roll Along," doesn't know a note of music, cannot read or write music or play the piano. His modus operandi is: Think of a catchy title, hum and memorise a tune, fit words to it and get his wife to write the tune down in crotchets and quavers. This method has enabled him to write songs for nearly every music hall artist of note.—Edwin Sefton in the "Daily Sketch."

POLICE COURT ON ITS METTLE.

Most people in Marylebone Police Court yesterday realised that legal and sociological history was being made. So did the Court. The moustached magistrate, Mr. Ivan Snell, looked the infantry officer he was in the war. He treated Mr. Aleck Bourne, the surgeon, with the suave courtesy of a High Court Judge. Mr. H. A. K. Morgan, who appeared for the Director of Public Prosecutions, is a tall, heavy man. He came into action with a surface relentlessness alarming to the surgeon's supporters. Beside the towering prosecutor was the dark and dapper Mr. Gerald Thesiger, Recorder of Rye. Mr. Thesiger's handling of the defendant's case, was a delight. He wasted no word, and his final speech to the magistrate was polished and logical. Except during the war, when he was a surgeon in France and Egypt, Mr. Bourne has always specialised in obstetrics. He had a brilliant career at Cambridge, and is now an examiner for the University. He is one of the comparatively few surgeons who are Fellows of the College of Gynaecology.—"Peterborough" in the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post."

HELENS.

Helen Jacobs meets Helen Wills Moody in finals of Women's Singles at Wimbledon to-day. Helen Jacobs is often known as "Helen II.," but in 1933 proved herself "Helen I." when she defeated Mrs. Moody in final of American Women's Singles. Two Helens lived within stone's throw of each other in same street in Californian town. Rivalry has always been intense. "Helen II." was born in Arizona 29 years ago. Was taught horsemanship by Indian on ranch before learned to play tennis. Has knocked at door of many championships in Europe. Helped by robust service and famous "chop" drive. Did much to popularise "shorts" on the courts for women, but once ran back to dressing-room at Wimbledon to put on stockings when Queen Mary came into Royal Box.—"The World This Morning" in the "News-Chronicle."

THE MARKETING OF EGGS.

WHOLESALE DEALERS' PRICES.

The Ministry of Agriculture has determined that the following shall be the prices payable by licensed wholesale dealers for eggs delivered during the week ending on Saturday, July 2, 1938.

Hen Eggs—For hen eggs purchased by a licensed wholesale dealer from a producer 9d per lb. Where the hen eggs were delivered by the producer to the packing store of a licensed wholesale dealer of Class "A" an additional halfpenny per lb. shall be paid.

Duck Eggs—For duck eggs purchased by a licensed wholsesale dealer from a producer, 9½d per dozen. Where the duck eggs were delivered by the producer to the packing store of a licensed wholesale dealer of Class "A" an additional three-farthings shall be paid for each complete dozen so delivered.

Deductions—Rejects ½d per egg.

QUESTION FROM THE DOCK.

When William M'Crudden, Bow Street, Belfast, was ordered one month's imprisonment at the City Custody Court to-day for assaulting his wife he turned in the dock and adddressing her said, "Are you satisfied now?"

SANDY ROW THRILLS

EARLY MORNING FIRE: ALL STATIONS CALL.

STREET TENANTS AROUSED.

AS A MEASURE OF PRECAUTION.

The Belfast Fire Brigade had a thrilling battle for 45 minutes in the early hours of this morning when fire broke out in the premises of Messrs. T. C. Thomas's upholstery and manufacturing department in Sandy Row.

The flames had already secured a good hold and were leaping skywards for 50 feet when the brigade arrived in response to an "All Stations" call. The Belfast Fire Chief, Mr. J. Smith, directed the operations, and the fireman's main concern was to prevent the outbreak spreading in this congested area.

Messrs. Thomas's premises are in Brewery Buildings, which is bound on three sides by Sandy Row, Rowland Street, and Renfrew Street. Also in this building are the premises of Messrs. Thomas Hunter, soap and chemical manufacturers, and Messrs. Gilpin's furniture stores, and both were entirely untouched by the fire, thanks to the speedy work of the brigade.

The firemen attacked the flames from every point of vantage, and so succeeded in confining them to the seat of the outbreak.

Very slight damage was done to the roof of the South Belfast Recreation Club's billiard rooms, which is adjoining, but apart from that the fire did not spread.

The houses in Rowland Street were also menaced, and the tenants were aroused as a precaution. The brigade, however, promptly forestalled any danger to that quarter by running two jets through the houses in the street to protect them from the rear.

The brigade arrived before two a.m., but despite this early hour there was quite a number of sightseers to watch the fire-fighters. In less than an hour the flames were entirely under control and all danger of a quick spread had gone.

Messrs. Thomas's premises are gutted, and one estimate of the damage places the figure in the region of £3,000.

EX-R.A.F. MAN SAVED FROM PRISON.

STRANGER PAYS £25 FINE.

DENNIS GOES TO HIS NEW HOME.

Stanley Parrack (27), former leading aircraftman who was fined £25 and dismissed from the R.A.F., for making his seven-year-old son Dennis hold live coals, has been saved from prison by an unknown man.

The month allowed by the magistrates for the payment of the fine expired at midnight and in default of payment the Court had ordered three months' imprisonment.

On Friday a stranger walked into the Magistrates' Clerks' Department in Brighton Town Hall and paid the fine.

Parrack, who is unemployed, on Wednesday applied in vain to the magistrates for an extension of time.

He then told the Court "I have had an offer of £5 for my furniture, but otherwise I have no money. I have had an official offer of employment by the service at Hendon. I shall, of course, lose that if I go to prison."

On Friday Dennis was handed over to the care of the Waifs' and Strays' Society. He will be educated at one of the society's schools until he is 14 and will be given vocational training until he is 16 or 17. Then a situation will be found for him.

DANCED BEFORE A BAND.

MUST PAY 40s, COURT RULED.

Stated to have danced in front of a band in York Street last night, Sarah Lavery, alias Tomlinson, Gt. George's Street, was at Belfast Custody Court, to-day, fined 40s for being drunk and disorderly.

Head-Constable M'Kenzie described Lavery's conduct as very bad. The person in front of the band tried to push her out of the way, but she would not go.

It was stated that the accused had 65 previous convictions.

MOTHER-ASSAULT CHARGE.

SAID IT WAS AN ACCIDENT.

A burly man named William John Thompson, Gardiner Street, was at Belfast Custody Court remanded until Friday on a charge of assault, occasioning actual bodily harm on his mother, Agnes Thompson.

Constable H. M'Knight said at 10-30 on Friday night he saw Mrs. Thompson, who had a severe wound on the back of her head. He later saw the accused, who was in an excited condition.

Thompson said it was only a pure accident happened his mother.

MONAGHAN URBAN COUNCIL

MR. J. M'NALLY AGAIN CHAIRMAN.

At the annual meeting of Monaghan Urban Council on Friday evening, Mr. Francis Duffy was, on the proposition of Mr. John M'Nally, seconded by Major J. G. E. Fitzgerald, re-elected chairman for his eighth successive year by seven votes to two.

Fianna Fail members, Messrs. E. Maguire and P. Murphy, opposed his re-appointment.

The Chairman, thanking the Council for re-electing him, said he even thanked those two members who voted against him. A little opposition always put a bit of life into a thing, and he thanked those members for giving it.

The Chairman then proposed Mr. Walter Greacen (Protestant member) for the vice-chair, and Mr. J. Mullen seconded.

Mr. Maguire, on behalf of his party, proposed Mr. J. Whelan.

Mr. Murphy seconded.

On a show of hands Mr. Greacen was elected by seven votes to two.

Mr. M'Nally proposed that the various committees remain as before, and this was agreed to.

Buttons, Pipings, Scarves, Belts, Jewellery

NOW that so many plain tailored types of frock are being worn, accessories of all kinds have med greater importance than ever ect this severity. And, on the other the very feminine styles and rials, of which there are many, also themselves to dainty trimmings, h can be bought readymade, and give professional finish to home-made ks.

By "Craftswoman" mong accessories are included novel es on the frock itself made by ons, pipings, ribbon contrasts, as as scarves, belts, jewellery, bags, s, stockings and gloves, all of which d careful thinking about to make m wearable with as many outfits as sible.

A counter full of art jewellery is always an attraction, particularly to the modern craftswoman, who is naturally interested in handicrafts. On one such counter were some charming bracelets made of flat wooden beads threaded on elastic, each flat surface being decorated with a colourful flower, outlined in poker-work and filled in with cellulose enamel, so that the bracelet was suitable to wear with a summer frock of almost any colour.

In shape the beads were oblong, about 1 inch by ½ inch with the four corners removed, making them eight-sided, so that there was nothing decidedly pointed to catch on frock or any coloured chiffon hankie which might be tucked under.

There were round buttons, square brooches and waist clasps, similarly decorated with flowers, etc., such as wild rose, scarlet pimpernel, gentian, forget-me-nots, small red berries, green acorns and eidelweiss.

Bracelets

Another idea for decorating wooden beads or bracelets is to enamel them with "good luck" emblems, in suitable colours; they need not be "pokered"—the black cat, either the head or the whole body; horseshoe—be sure it is the right way up—new moon, elephant, and four-leaf clover, are a few of them.

Other articles of jewellery which made a good show were in lovely green and dahlia shades of a semi-transparent, glass-like substance—there were large brooches with quaint designs in semi-relief, also waistbelt ornaments, bracelets, beads, and finger-rings. The latter were rather clumsy, but could be very smart worn by the right woman, if no other ring was worn on the hand, and matching, say, brooch or shoulder ornament—the effect is always more choice if one or two pieces only of this somewhat bizarre jewellery is worn at one time.

Ribbons of all kinds—petersham, grosgrain, velvet, taffeta, moire, faille, and organdie—are used for accessories and offer scope for ingenuity to those with the happy knack of thinking out "original ways."

ONE model of black tulle had ribbons worked into vertical diamonds in five different colours running the whole way up a bouffant skirt; another model showed narrow sarsenet ribbon used to embroider an all-over leaf design on a white organdie skirt. Bands of coloured grosgrain edged with narrow frills of matching Valenciennes lace are used for belts.

Petersham ribbon in a vivid fuchsia was pleated and edged a collar, cuffs and front opening of a light navy frock, and the same colour combined with navy petersham, was also introduced on the matching hat.

Wide ribbons make rich-looking sashes, bows and shoulder trimmings. A plain collarless linen-lace frock in natural colour had a row of self-covered buttons down the front and for its sole trimming a narrow bow of black velvet at the neck to match a similar narrow belt. A large transparent black straw hat had a narrow band of velvet and a posy of linen-lace flowers.

Neck Wear

It really scarcely pays to make your own lace or other neckwear nowadays unless you chance to have suitable pieces by you, or take a delight in doing fine work, as such lovely neckwear in great variety, is obtainable in the shops at most reasonable prices. But for the most part choose those which launder easily. Many delightful flowers made of white or cream lace give a pretty finish to plain frocks.

For those who do not want washing collars and cuffs, there are exceptionally well thought-out ones of roll-braid in various contrasting colours and pretty shapes, sometimes finishing with long tassel ends, and cuffs to match. Cream, beige and pale green, also black, beige and scarlet, are two good colour combinations.

Another type of trimming which is useful to edge plain collars, cuffs, neck-edges, front and yoke, also to trim hat bands, are small felt cut-outs with serrated edges. These flower-like motifs can be bought by the dozen or the gross, in lots of colours and shades, and are stitched in their centres at intervals where required with silk knot or bead.

FOR SUMMER DANCES

CARE OF THE EAR

By "The Matron"

THE ear is not generally regarded as being a particularly important feature of the human anatomy. The only purpose it is popularly supposed to possess is to act as a medium of hearing, and hearing is perhaps the sense that most people would least prefer to lose rather than any other.

Yet the ear is one of the most sensitive parts of the delicate human organism, and is, moreover, closely involved in the whole intricate nerve system. Ill-health of any sort usually affects the ear, which, in its turn, exercises an influence upon the condition of the individual.

ONE common and greatly dreaded affliction which has a close connection with the ears is sea-sickness.

This is because the ear possesses another faculty in addition to that of hearing. It can also register a sense of position, and assists in the maintenance of equilibrium or balance. This sense depends on the presence of liquid in the ears, which is agitated by movement, and when such liquid is violently disturbed, as by the motion of a ship, an acute feeling of sickness ensues.

A COURT GOWN OF WHITE WOOL SHOWN IN LONDON THIS WEEK.

DON'T HOARD

By Gertrude Shirley Hampden

OLD letters. Clear out your writing-desk at least once every month. At the same time take care to keep addresses and note the initials of business people with whom you have dealings.

. . . . Useless plants in your garden Clear the beds thoroughly and re-plan your garden ever so often. If you don't you will soon have it looking like a wilderness.

. . . . Old saucepans. Scrap those which are absolutely no further use. On the other hand remember that an old saucepan, with the handle removed and a coat of paint makes an excellent bulb or fern pot.

. . . . . Old and stained ash-trays. These things are cheap enough, so why not have new ones every six months or so. The neatest room can look untidy if the ash-trays are old and stained.

. . . . Very old frocks. Do them up in a bundle and either give them away or sell them to an old-clothes dealer. It often pays, however, to hoard odd lengths of materials, ribbons, and so forth, because one never knows when they will come in handy.

OLD hats and caps in the hall. So many hall-stands are loaded with junk of this kind that makes the finding of wearable headgear difficult.

. . . . Old and stale cakes in the cake-tin. If you keep cakes too long they will be useless even for the making of trifles. With regard to stale bread, see what you have got in the bin once a week, and make a bread pudding.

. . . . Tins. So many men are in the habit of hoarding dozens of cigarette and tobacco tins, and this does litter up the place so terribly. Clear these things out periodically.

. . . . Ends of cakes of soap in the bathroom. When you bring out a new cake of soap, don't throw the old end away. Take it into the scullery for use in washing-up, or wet both the old and new pieces, and press them firmly together. The small end will stick to the larger piece, and there will be no waste.

LONDON DIARY of an ULSTERWOMAN

AN Ulsterman, Mr. Hans Rowan-Hamilton, has presented a cup for women polo players. The cup, he tells me, is to be called the "Clanbrassil" Cup, and it is the first time a trophy has been presented for women. A polo dance is to be held on July 13. Mr. Rowan-Hamilton is one of the committee. His mother, Lady Rowan-Hamilton, gave a cocktail party at her house this week to talk about the dance. The prime mover in it is the Duke of Hamilton's daughter, Lady Margaret Drummond-Hay. The polo championship is the first in the history of polo, and it is interesting to know that a Co. Down man, whose family has played a prominent part in the history of Ulster, should be sponsoring it in such a practical way. Amongst the players will be, I hear, an Indian, Miss Batlivala, who practises as a barrister in this country.

Duchess has Holiday.

The Duchess of Abercorn is having a holiday in London. She has many friends here who love to see her at parties, but for the most part the Duchess likes a quiet time, visiting her family, and paying informal calls on her friends. She accepted an invitation the other day to the "at home" given by Mrs. Chamberlain and the Prime Minister. Members of the Diplomatic Corps and Members of Parliament were there, and amongst others who had accepted invitations were Priscilla Countess Annesley, Louisa Countess of Antrim, the Earl of Clanwilliam (whose wife has gone on a cruise to the Northern capitals), and Sir Ronald and Lady Ross.

COUNTESS OF ENNISKILLEN.

The Countess of Enniskillen has not been much in London this season. She spent a considerable part of the year in Ireland, and now she has gone to Vienna. On her return, I am told, she will go straight back to Fermanagh.

Chain of Luxury Clubs.

I wrote some time ago in this diary about a scheme Lady George Cholmondeley had for erecting a chain of luxury clubs for domestic servants in London and the provincial cities. The scheme was to be launched at a cost of £50,000 and it was thought that it might help to solve the domestic servant problem, and make maids happier. Lady Cholmondeley tells me that she has had to postpone the plans, and temporarily, at least, abandon her scheme. Class consciousness, I understand, was the prime reason for its failure at the moment; there seems all sorts of barriers against domestic workers; typists and shop-girls all consider themselves a "cut above" them, and the maids themselves are very conscious of their social rank. It is a pity, for as everybody with any sense knows, domestic service occupies a position at least as worthy as that of any other kind of work, and with good-will on the part of the employer and employees it can be made just as happy an avenue of employment.

Juvenile Delinquency.

Magistrates and social workers throughout the country are perturbed by what they call the serious rise in juvenile delinquency. The other day I went along to the the Institute of Child Psychology to see what the workers there had to say about it. Their views will be, I think, of interest to Northern Ireland people. It was gratifying to know they are not unduly worried. One of the directors of the Institute, Dr. Margaret Lowenfeld told me that there had been no real increase in juvenile crime; the increase was in the number of indictable offences. It was like the increase in motoring offences. Anybody who had the wings of his car scratched was placed under "accidents." Another point she made was that streets to-day are so dangerous that children have no outlet for their energy. Children need active outside employment, and if they don't get it they get into mischief. One of the active workers at the Institute made the same point. She had found from her investigations that crime in children is rarely criminal. "There is no adventure in a modern town" she said to me, "no trees to climb, no rivers to paddle in." The desire for appreciation at home is one of the most potent factors in their "crime"; a child who is badly treated at home will steal because he wants pleasure. It is an infantile way of coping with the situation. All with whom I talked at the Institute stressed the fact that even really bad children can be turned into respectable citizens if they are properly handled. They have plenty of evidence to prove that.

DON'T LOOK TIRED

Shadows and little lines beneath the eyes give the face a tired look which is somewhat ageing.

They may be most effectively disguised if a little pale peach coloured liquid foundation, with a powder base, is patted under the eyes before powdering.

Rouge should be placed rather high over the cheeks, so that the edges of the colour are smoothed away into the shadows beneath the eye.

And whenever you have finished powdering your face, always dip a piece of cotton-wool into a rather pale-coloured powder and draw it over the skin under the eyes.

KEEPING 1ST JULY.

BRITISH LEGION'S TRIBUTE.

AT SOMME COMMEMORATION

IMPOSING BELFAST PARADE.

The turn-out of the local branches of the British Legion (in conjunction with affiliated Old Comrades' Associations and ex-Service organisations) was never more imposing than when they marched to the Garden of Remembrance, City Hall, Belfast, on Friday evening, for the Somme commemoration. Public interest in the parade, too, was never manifested more impressively. Thousands of people concentrated at Donegall Square from every area of the county borough, and at times the traffic congestion became embarrassing to pedestrians and drivers.

The parade was in charge of Vice-Admiral N. E. Archdale, with Major H. R. Haslett as chief marshal, and the success was due to these officials with the co-operation of Major E. R. May and Capt. C. H. Mack.

The parade proceeded from Custom House Square in the following order:—Corporation Transport Band; O.C. Parade; N.I. Area British Legion Headquarters, and colours; Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers O.C.A.; Royal Ulster Rifles O.C.A.; Royal Irish Fusiliers O.C.A.; Dunmurry Military Band; Colours, 10th Royal Irish Rifles to 9th Royal Irish Rifles O.C.A.'s inclusive; 10th Royal Irish Rifles O.C.A.; 14th Royal Irish Rifles O.C.A.; 15th Royal Irish Rifles O.C.A.; 16th Royal Irish Rifles O.C.A.; 36th Division Field Ambulance, R.A.M.C.; 8th Royal Irish Rifles O.C.A.; 9th Royal Irish Rifles O.C.A.; H.M.S. Caroline Band; British Legion colours; Naval Branch, British Legion; Cregagh Branch, British Legion; Dundonald Branch, British Legion; Wandsworth Branch, British Legion; Belfast Branch, British Legion.

The Women's Section, British Legion, and Limbless Ex-Servicemen's Association and the Craigavon men assembled in The Garden of Remembrance to await the various units.

Close to the Queen Victoria statue a salute was taken by Major-General R. V. Pollok, C.B.E., D.S.O., General Officer commanding Northern Ireland District.

Altogether 22 organisations took part in the tribute and a wreath was placed on the Cenotaph on behalf of each unit.

The ceremony reached its most impressive point when the buglers of the Welch sounded the "Last Post" and the colours were dipped.

Mr. M. Vinycomb, secretary, had the executive details planned with his customary efficiency.

FROM DAIL TO CENOTAPH.

Fresh from his recent victory in East Donegal Major Sproule Myles, M.C., T.D., oined his old comrades of the Inniskillings on Friday and on their behalf, along with Captain Wm. Knight, M.C., and Mr. A. D. Greer, laid a wreath on the Belfast Cenotaph.

BALLYMENA.

The Somme anniversary was com- morated in Ballymena an impressive vice being conducted at the Memorial k by Rev. J. Dunwoody, B.A., First lymena Presbyterian Church.

There was a large turnout of ex- vicemen, under Capt. H. Simpson Capt. R. M. Pryde; of Girl Guides der Miss M. Anderson, Assistant unty Commissioner; and of Boys' gade, First Ballymena and Harryville mpanies, under Capt. James A. Ross. mbers of the Women's Section of the tish Legion and Members of the al Ulster Constabulary, were also sent.

pt. A. O'N. Chichester was standard to the British Legion, and Staff-geant A. Dornan carried the B.B. The parade was headed by the mena Silver Band.

The members of the Urban Council who attended were Mr. John Morrow (vice-chairman), Messrs. W. W. M'Fetridge, Fred M'Clelland, Andrew Beggs, James M'Ilhagga, and James Henry.

Wreaths were placed on behalf of the Urban Council and Legion.

COMBER.

The local branch of the British Legion attended a Remembrance Service at the War Memorial in the Square, Comber, on Friday evening. The members, under the command of Captain F. G. Smith with their colours, headed by the Comber Amateur (Prize) Flute Band, marched from the Andrews Hall to the Square. In the ranks were Miss E. De Wind and Mrs. R. Baxter who served during the War.

The service was conducted by Ven. the Archdeacon of Down (Rev. C. C. Manning, M.C., M.A., C.F.,) who delivered an address.

Hymns were sung, the "Dead March" was then played, and wreaths were laid.

DROMORE (CO. DOWN).

A service in memory of the men from Dromore and district who made the supreme sacrifice at the Battle of the Somme was held at the War Memorial, Dromore, on Friday evening. The ex-Servicemen paraded in charge of Company Sergeant-Major W. J. Russell, M.M., headed by the Bruce Hamilton Memorial Flute Band.

Rev. G. A. Joynt, M.A. (Banbridge), deputising for Rev. S. H. J. Currie, conducted the service, which commenced with the hymn, "O God our help in ages past," the singing being led by members of Dromore Methodist Church Choir, accompanied by the band.

Following the pronouncement of the Benediction, a wreath was laid on behalf of the members of the Dromore Branch of the British Legion by Mr. Robert Johnston.

The service concluded with the singing of the National Anthem.

SERVICE AT NEWTOWNARDS.

The Somme Anniversary was observed in Newtownards at a service organised by the local branch of the British Legion, which was held at the War Memorial. Rev. R. J. M. Park, M.A.; Rev. Geo. F. M'Quitty, Rev. Geo. T. Boyd, M.A., and Rev. Canon T. B. Brown, M.A., took part, and following the sounding of the Last Post the Silence was observed and the Reveille was then blown. Wreaths were laid on behalf of the British Legion and the 13th Batt. R.I.R. Boy Scouts, Girl Guides and Boys' Brigade also took part in the service.

ULSTER DIVISION EX-OFFICERS.

ANNUAL LONDON DINNER.

KING'S THANKS FOR GREETING.

"The King sincerely thanks the officers of the late 36th (Ulster) Divisional Association, dining together this evening, for their loyal greetings, which his Majesty much appreciates."

This telegram was received and read by the chairman, Major General Clifford Coffin, V.C., C.B., D.S.O., Colonel Commandant Royal Engineers, at the Thiepval anniversary dinner in the Trocadero Restaurant, London, on Friday night.

"Officers late 36th (Ulster) Divisional Association at their annual dinner at the Trocadero Restaurant offer humble duty and real assurances of loyal service.—Major General Clifford Coffin, chairman."

The attendance included:—

Major General W. Brooke Purden, D.S.O., C.B.E., M.C.; Brigadier General W. F. Hessey, D.S.O.; Colonels A. L. Abbott, M.C.; E. W. Crawford, C.B.E., D.S.O.; J. W. Duke, D.S.O., M.C.; H. F. Grant-Suttie, D.S.O., M.C.; H. Lloyd Howard, M.C.; S. V. Kennedy, M.C.; John Leader, J. A. Mulholland, M.C.

Lieut.-Colonels.—E. Gribben, M.C.; C. C. Hardie, D.S.O.; J. E. Knott, C.M.G., D.S.O.

Majors—J. C. Boyle, C. M. Castle, M.C.; E. N. Clokey, M.C.; M. J. D. Kerr, P. B. Lewis, M.C.; J. D. M'Callum, C.B.E., D.S.O.; V. B. Rogers, D.S.O., M.C., D.L. (hon. sec. of the Association), J. R. Whyte.

Captains—C. H. B. Allen, C. B. Belt, M.C.; W. L. Devote, W. A. Edmenson, E. V. Field, E. A. Godson, M.C.; G. B. Goyder, E. N. Kennedy, M.C.; T. K. Knox, M.C.; C. W. R. Pantlin, R. B. Solomon, M.C.; A. Wallace.

Lieut. C. A. Simeons.

The only toast was that of "The King."

Major Rogers announced a number of apologies and the reading of letters from old comrades now occupying positions in various parts of the Kingdom was followed with keen interest.

Field Marshal Sir Claud Jabob and General Sir Hubert Gough, whom it was hoped to have present as guests of honour, were both unable to attend owing to prior engagements.

Sir Claud Jacob mentioned that he was presiding at the dinner of the regiment of which he was colonel, and very much regretted not being able to be present.

General Gough wrote that it was very nice of the Ulster Division to ask him to dine with them, but unfortunately and, to his great regret, he had promised to go down to Canford School in Dorset and present a riding prize and he would not be able to get back in time.

"I must therefore refuse," added the General, "but please accept my best thanks all the same and say how sorry I am not to be able to meet you all."

Amongst others who sent apologies were:—Viscount Craigavon; Lieut.-Col. Sir William Allen, D.S.O., M.P.; Lieut.-Col. Sir Wilfred B. Spender, D.S.O., M.C.; Major Sir Hugh O'Neill, Bart., M.P.; Lieut.-Col. C. F. Cole-Hamilton; Captain H. Cansdale, Captain Leslie J. Johnston, Belfast; Captain J. H. A. Patton, Belfast, and Lieut. J. Curley, Belfast.

The company was especially pleased to receive through Major Rogers a message of greeting from Colonel S. H. Green, who was badly injured in the war.

"I visited him at Deal a couple of months ago," said Major Rogers, "and he is very fit physically, but unfortunately there is no improvement as regards his power of speech. He sends his love to everybody and hopes you will have a good evening. He hopes to come along another year. Although wonderfully fit he still cannot get out his enunciation."

The evening was subsequently spent by the company in groups renewing old acquaintanceships and exchanging experiences.

RETURN OF ROBERT HARKNESS.

Mr. Robert Harkness, who was a co-worker with Torrey, Alexander, and Chapman in world-wide evangelistic campaigns, as well as being the composer of many of the tunes in Alexander's Hymn Book, is paying a brief visit to Belfast.

Great Victoria Street Baptist Church has been fortunate in securing his services for July 3 and 4, when, as announced in our advertising columns, pianoforte recitals with an evangelical appeal will be given.

Some idea of this famous composer's ability may be grasped from the fact that he has set to music more than two thousand hymns and Gospel songs, and has prepared the evangelistic message in over 300 recitals.

BELFAST BEAUTY AWARD.

This week's special Birthday Gift Number of "Woman's Life" announces that one of the weekly prizes in the "Dawn" Beauty Competition has been awarded to Miss Peggy Mullan, Falls Road, Belfast, who will receive a handsome dressing set. Weekly winners qualify for a Final Prize of £50 and a free Film Test.

The issue contains many other interesting features including a Birthday Gift of a Free Pattern. Birthday Gifts for Service Club members, splendid fiction, and the usual features.

BANNER UNFURLING.

ORANGEISM AND BIBLE.

LORD CARSON WREATH RIBBON.

Half of an orange ribbon, preserved from a wreath on Lord Carson's grave, was pinned by Mrs. J. E. Warnock to a new banner she unfurled for Donegall Road Volunteers L.O.L. No. 852 in Sandy Row Orange Hall on Friday evening. "The remainder I shall replace in my Bible from which I took it this morning," she added.

The ceremony took place during a re-union which was largely attended by members and friends and visiting officers of other Districts.

The banner, which is beautifully designed and painted, has on one side a full-length portrait of King William III. in Royal robes, and on the other is a representation of England's greatness—the open Bible, the Crown and crossed swords.

Br. Robert J. Hobbs (D.D.M. No. 5 District) presided, and after extending a hearty welcome called upon Mrs. Warnock.

Mrs. Warnock gave the history of the ribbon, and said in her Bible it marked the 20th Psalm, where in verse 5 they read: "In the name of our God we will set up our banners." She thought that had a special message for them, as they all knew the Orange Order was primarily a religious Institution. She trusted it would continue to flourish, and it was her earnest hope that the members of No. 852 as they followed that banner would be ever mindful of their privilege and of the high principles of the Order. (Applause).

Miss Elizabeth White presented Mrs. Warnock with a souvenir pair of scissors.

Br. Rev. C. W. Maguire (St. Simon's), who dedicated the banner, referred to Psalm 60, verse 4—"Thou hast given a banner to them that fear thee, that it may be displayed because of the truth." Their banner, he said, was not to rest in a corner, but to be carried, displayed and honoured. He spoke of moral deterioration due to gambling, and asked if the Orange Order had no moral mission. The vice of gambling had reached enormity, and if something could not be done to curb that diversion they were in danger of getting the wrong material for the Orange Institution for that training.

Br. Councillor K. Leacock, J.P., proposed a vote of thanks to Mrs. Warnock. This was seconded by Br. Jos. Stewart, D.M., and supported by Br. Robert Dickson, J.P.

A vote of thanks to Rev. C. W. Maguire was proposed by Br. Alderman George R. Black, J.P., seconded by Br. David M'Clinton (No. 3 District) and supported by Br. Hugh Dobson (No. 3 District Secretary).

Br. J. E. Warnock, K.C., M.P. (Eldon L.O.L. No. 7), replied to the vote of thanks to his wife He said such ceremonies as that spoke of the progress and virility of the Orange Order.

"I know that the Order is stronger and wields greater influence to-day than at any time in its history," he added, "and I believe that it is destined to play a most important part not only in the history of Northern Ireland, but also in that of the United Kingdom and the Empire."

GRAND MASTER'S CALL.

Sir Joseph Davison, County Grand Master, Belfast, unfurled a new banner for Seaver L.O.L. 1905 at Pakenham Street, on Friday evening.

Sir Joseph recalled that he had had the pleasure of unfurling a banner for the lodge 12 or 13 years ago, which was presented to the lodge by the late Br. Sir Robert Baird. He mentioned that he appreciated the difficulties they had to contend with, and he wished them every success and prosperity. He expressed the hope that they would have as many young men as possible in the Orange Institution, as long as they were of sound Protestant principles. Many people were antagonistic to them, and sought to malign them, but the Order was stronger to-day than ever before. (Applause.) They had, he proceeded, many enemies in the Imperial Province, and they needed every Protestant they could get in the Order. (Applause)

Br. S. Robinson, P.M., presented Sir Joseph with a silver penknife, and following the unfurling ceremony the County Grand Master was thanked by Br. Robinson.

The officers of the lodge are—Master, Br. F. Williams; Deputy Master, Br. George M'Dowell; secretary, Br. H. Caddell; treasurer, Br. Francis Freebairn.

KILLYLEAGH OLIVE BRANCH R.B.P.

A banner was unfurled on Friday evening for Killyleagh Olive Branch R.B.P. No. 50. Preceptories and lodges from the surrounding district, and the general public attended. Sir Kt. and Br. Rev. J. G. Pooler, M.A., Imperial Grand Chaplain, who presided, declared that the preservation of the principles of the Black Order—a religious order—with their watchwords of Liberty and Unity were the truest and best ideals. He called upon Mrs. M'Cleery a member of the Women's Orange Order, and wife of Sir Kt. and Br. W. V. M'Cleery, J.P., Ballymoney, to unfurl the banner

Mrs. M'Cleery apologised for the absence of her husband through indisposition. She recalled many friendships made in Killyleagh many years ago and stated that Killyleagh was noted far and wide as a stronghold of Orangeism. In a letter she read from her husband, he stated that having become a member of R.B.P. 50 some 35 years ago, he never regretted taking that step. They both wished the brethren every prosperity in the years to come.

Br. Hans Gilmore, W.M. of R.B.P. 50, handed to Mrs. M'Cleery a souvenir pair of scissors, and she unfurled the banner.

Colonel Gordon, D.S.O., M.P., said Killyleagh should be proud of the great army of supporters on an occasion like that. He referred to the noble part played by Ulstermen on that anniversary, the first of July, and asked the assembly to observe a minute's silence in memory of those who made the supreme sacrifice in Flanders 22 years ago. Every head was immediately uncovered.

Other speakers were Br. J. C. Boggs, B.A., and Rev. R. H. Beattie, B.A., and Messrs. W. H. Martin, J.P., and Hugh Brown, J.P.

The proceedings terminated with the National Anthem.

BALLYMENA GOLDEN STAR L.O.L.

There was a large turn-out of Orangemen for the unfurling of a banner for Ballymena Golden Star L.O.L. No. 491 at the Protestant Hall on Friday evening.

Br. A. L. M'Clelland presided, and Br. the Rt. Hon. G. C. G. Young, M.B.E., M.P., County Grand Master, performed the unfurling ceremony with a knife, suitably inscribed, presented to him by little Miss Myra Tennant.

The banner bears on one side a portrait of the late Br. John Brown, a P.M. of the lodge, who had been a member of the Order for 56 years.

Br. J. Bailie, D.S., also addressed the meeting.

Ballymena Silver Band was in attendance.

PORTADOWN.

Corcrain Conservative Prize Flute Band headed the procession from the Orange Hall, Carleton Street.

Br. Dr G. Dougan, D.T., presided, and after Sir William Allen had performed the unfurling ceremony, the dedicatory prayer was said by Br. Rev. J. I. Lea, B.A. (Mullavilly), District Chaplain.

Addressing the gathering, Sir William Allen said that Mr. De Valera had so bamboozled the English politicians that they gave him far more than he ever expected. Now he was casting envious eyes at Ulster, but he would never gain his desire. He had put a Protestant in as President of Southern Ireland simply to blindfold the people of England. That, it was said, was an example to Ulster Loyalists, but if Mr. De Valera had chosen one of his own followers or one of Mr. Cosgrave's ructions would have followed.

Sir William was thanked on the motion of Br. D. England, district lay chaplain, seconded by Br. R. J. Magowan, U.D.C., W.M. of No. 322, and supported by Br. J. Bell, D.G.M. of the I.G.B.C.

The chairman was also thanked on the proposition of Br. A. Adair, D.M. of L.O.L. No. 40, seconded by Mr. G. Shaw Cooke, L.O.L. No. 56.

JUSTICE FITZGIBBON RETIRING.

Mr. Justice FitzGibbon, who has been a member of the Eire Supreme Court since 1924 is due to retire under the age limit after the present law sittings.

GIPSY SMITH WEDS TO-DAY.

TIME OF CEREMONY A SECRET.

HOLLYWOOD (California), Saturday.—Gipsy Smith, the 78-year-old evangelist, and his 26-year-old bride, Miss Mary Alice Shaw, have taken elaborate precautions to keep the public, reporters and photographers away from their wedding, which is due "sometime to-day."

A heavy guard has been thrown round the house of the bride's mother, where the ceremony is to be performed.

Only 14 guests, all relations or close friends of the family, have been invited.

Gipsy Smith's son, the Rev. A. R. Smith, will officiate, and his grand-daughter, Betty Smith, will attend the bride, whose mother told Reuter that the bride was "very happy."

The bride and bridegroom refused to make statements. Gipsy Smith and his wife are leaving for London after a short American tour.—Reuter.

Kent Taylor and Nan Grey in Universal's "Love in a Bungalow."

He looks deep into her eyes and remembers their first meeting. That idyllic summer day . . . and he had thought there could be nothing lovelier in all the world than this laughing girl with the exquisite skin. SATURDAY, JULY 2, 1938.

BIGGER BELFAST.

THE extension of the boundary of Belfast has been a recurrent topic for many years. The outgrowth of the city forced the subject on public attention. The Corporation has dallied over a long period in tackling the problem seriously, but at last it has come to grips with it and taken a resolution to move in the matter. Although much that is impressive can be said on the other side we believe the decision to be well founded. Reference back to our columns will show that we regarded the larger scheme which proposed to embrace places like Holywood and Dunmurry within the ambit of the city as rather overdoing it, but now that the proposal is modified we think it is only natural and reasonable that the civic authority should adopt it.

The enlargement of municipal Belfast is inevitable. The brick and mortar boundary of the city has already far outstripped the boundary delineated at the passing of the Act of 1896, the same Act under which the Corporation was made to consist of 15 Aldermen and 45 Councillors and the number of wards was increased from 5 to 15. In recent years building has proceeded at an accelerated pace and new urban colonies have sprung up on the outskirts of the city. The tendency is to move outward and although it is said that building may soon reach saturation point we believe that with the facilities existing to-day enabling householders to purchase their dwellings in lieu of paying rent the outward movement will continue. The increase in houses does not necessarily imply an increase in population. The fact is, however, that there are large areas which may be said to be of Belfast though legally not in Belfast. It is time this anomaly was remedied; indeed, as the Lord Mayor observed, it is long overdue. Almost all the amenities which the city provides are available for the residents in the new areas and it is only equitable that they should shoulder its responsibilities. The Corporation has no control over the building which is eating further and further into rural stretches, oftentimes to the disfigurement of the landscape and reckless of planning in relation to a whole. Eventually these areas will become a responsibility of the Corporation and while it might conserve the rates in the next few years to defer extension the cost in the future will be all the greater if the nettle is not grasped now.

We believe that extension is a matter in which the better policy is to take the longer view. When the last enlargement took place every objection that is now urged was put forward; indeed there never was an extension scheme that did not evoke heat and bitterness. Who will say to-day, however, that the district of Sydenham, for instance, should still be outside the city boundary, yet over this very district there was a great outcry forty years ago when it was brought in. No city has a finer setting than Belfast. Unified control should make for a better safeguarding of the amenities and should expedite such schemes as arterial routes held up to-day because of dual or treble jurisdiction. The extension of the city, we repeat, is inevitable and is dictated by facts which stare everyone in the face. The City Council is acting rightly in addressing itself to what is a plain duty.

During the past half year, according to "The Motor Ship," 110 large motor ships of 709,000 tons gross have been completed throughout the world. These figures compare with 97 ships of 605,000 tons gross for the corresponding period of 1937, and they are larger than have been recorded during the past 10 years. It is estimated that, for the whole of 1938, the gross tonnage completed throughout the world, including both steam and motor vessels, will be about 2,500,000. This is not excessive, since it represents approximately the average annual output for the whole period between 1920 and 1930.

Thoughts for the Times

by Dr. A. D. Belden

IT is a matter for some congratulation that commercial advertisement, which is thrust so continuously before our eyes, has improved in recent years both artistically and in subject matter, more play being given to the blessed gift of humour.

A good deal of amusement has been caused lately by one series of advertisements that must not be too clearly defined, since this is not an advertisement. Many echoes will be raised in the minds of my readers by such sentences as "She finished her washing the night before she started it!"—"He passed his examination successfully 12 hours before he sat for it!"

These little exciting captions, with their great air of mystery, advocate the use of a certain food before retiring, but they rely for their effect upon the great truth that careful preparation is one of the secrets of life's success. This is a world of tests for struggling humanity, and it is more than academic subjects in which we are constantly being examined. It is not only one's French or Latin, one's mathematics or logic that are tested out, but the physical habits which have rendered the brain clear or muddy, one's stamina strong or weak.

IT is indeed both amusing, and at times tragic, what great events turn on small things. A recent railway disaster, which resulted in several deaths, was traced to the simple failure of a workman to make an efficient, though trivial, connection, and the failure of the person supposed to inspect the work to notice the defect.

It has been pointed out very effectively of late that one of the great contributions of this machine age is the development of a new conscientiousness in humanity, something much more than has ever been known before. Day after day the lives of millions of people rest upon the most faithful achievement of efficiency in trifles, as in the fixing of machinery, the controlling of signals, and of all the intricate engine-power of transport on land and sea and air.

It is the very old story repeated in an entirely new and most fascinating context:—

"For want of a nail the shoe was lost,
For want of a shoe the horse was lost,
For want of a rider the battle was lost."

Great events rest back upon small loyalties, and as was said long ago by the Master of Life, "He that is faithful over little shall be made ruler over much."

ALL this makes a strong demand for harmony in the various aspects of life. One's recreations and habits of eating and drinking, of mental exercise and spiritual reinforcement, should all make for the utmost efficiency in the more serious work of every day.

This is the value of the "night before" idea. It is a wise thing to organise your life as a complete whole. It is not everyone who finds equal refreshment in the same recreation. "One man's meat is another man's poison."

Some men find their mind rested and invigorated by the diligent pursuit of a small ball round a golf course, providing they show no undue anxiety about the score; others derive exactly the same benefit from less arduous hobbies, such as the study of birds, or a bit of homely gardening. What is quite evident is that the play-side of life cannot be ignored if the work of the world is to be really well done.

When, therefore, our lives are become as they are to-day, more and more woven together by mutual responsibility and service, it behoves us to show a jealous care for one another's opportunities of recreation.

The strenuous Carlylean gospel of work is rather out of date—"All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," and this modern civilisation, which is so crowded, and in which the penalties of carelessness can be so widespread and calamitous, cannot afford any "dull boys," so be careful what you do "the night before!"

The Riddle of the Vanished Cruiser

JAMES MOFFATT tells the strange story on this page on Monday of the disappearance of the Black Prince, one of the greatest sea mysteries of modern times. Mr. Moffatt served on H.M.S. Collingwood in the battle in which, 22 years ago, the cruiser vanished with over 860 souls on board.

Uncommon Sense

Clothes Make The Man—By JOHN BLAKE.

WE all know that old proverb, but how many of us apply it? Excuses are no good here either. The proverb says nothing about expense or style.

We cannot all of us afford the kind of clothes we would like. But we should make the best of what we have. It is proverbial also how much appearances count, but the lack of profiting by that is more proverbial.

* * *

Think of the people who impress you favourably. Aren't their clothes in keeping? Don't they all have a pleasant and attractive appearance?

Men are respected who respect themselves. A man who hasn't the time to look his best isn't the type you feel you have much time to spend on either.

Of course, the proverb does not mention women And it is true women seem to understand such things better than men. But even if you consider what women stand out from the crowd, you'll find it isn't always the prettiest. It's usually the smartest dressed. The one who is most conscious of her looks and able to dress herself according to her type.

* * *

Dressing well does not mean following a style or being lavish. Some of the best dressed men seem the least conspicuous. But you will find they choose their clothes with care. They exercise their own individual judgment. They observe clothes in others. They apply their findings.

What a good start a salesman has who makes a pleasing entrance! If you like his looks, you'll probably trust him. If he is faddish and freaky, you suspect his product must be, too.

* * *

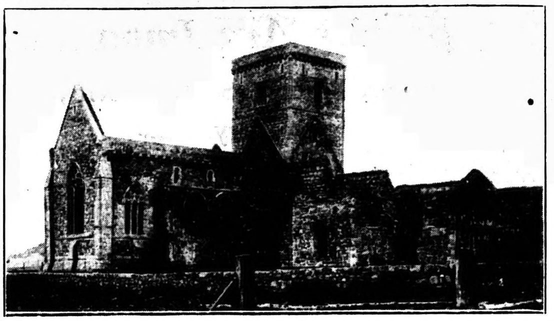
What is true of the salesman is true of any business man. It's true of workers of any kind.

A man who is always well-dressed can look well even in overalls. He'll be careful about selecting even them. And he will keep them looking like something.

Look in your mirror and see how you could improve your appearance. You can't change your face. But you can change your clothes.

AT THE "OTHER END" OF THE GIANT'S CAUSEWAY YOU WILL FIND THE . . .

. . Islands of Enchantment



The old Cathedral on the Island of Iona. On the Island is Scotland's oldest Christian burial place, among those buried there being 48 Scottish and two Irish Kings.

DO you remember how, as a child, you used to stand of an evening watching the fishing boats sailing away into the sunset, and how you longed to sail with them to those enchanted isles which you were sure lay beyond the golden horizon?

Not all of childhood's dreams come true. But if you have ever spent a holiday in the Hebrides you know that there really are islands far more magical and lovely than any your childish imagination could have conceived, lying cradled in the sunset just as you had pictured them.

It is true they are always being "discovered" by somebody. Yet so varied are their charms and withal so individual their appeal that each explorer has the illusion of being in some sense a pioneer. Perhaps that is why, every year, someone goes in search of what Doctor Johnson sought long ago, Walter Scott found, and the men of Ulster already knew from time immemorial.

Fifteen centuries have passed since Saint Columba sailed for Iona, and long before that the little currachs plied back and forth between Ulster and the Western Isles. For though our legendary Giant abandoned his attempt to build a causeway across he left open the roadway of the seas.

BY that path came Cuthullin the Mighty, and Ossian, and Deirdre of the Sorrows, and many another besides. Over those golden seas sailed Robert the Bruce, and Rory Mor, and Bonnie Prince Charlie. Round the shores of these rock-bound islands lie the battered ribs of high-prowed Viking ships side by side with the ill-fated galleons of Spain's Great Armada.

Yet of all those who came and went to The Islands there is not one who stole from them an iota of their magic. Rather did they leave behind them such store of romance and beautiy, hope and despair, joy and sorrow, love and hate, that the very atmosphere seems to be filled with the emotions of their changeful lives.

To write of the Hebrides is to fall, almost unconsciously, into the language of metaphor. Here it seems peculiarly fitting to talk of the laughter of streams, the weeping of mists, the gloom of dark waters, and the gay pageantry of the skies.

But it is time that I made an end of preliminaries and told you something tangible about the islands of the sunset. Not, indeed, that there is much tangibility about the ever-changing light and colour which is their chief charm. To describe this is to make an attempt to snatch a rainbow from the clouds and bring it back to you like a roll of ribbon as a souvenir.

It was never my intention to say that you must see this place or that, when the very essence of your enjoyment will be to discover your own magic and try to catch your own rainbows. But, if you will come sailing with me in fancy, I shall endeavour to share with you a few pictures from my treasure-trove. If you are already a lover of the Hebrides they may serve to revive happy memories. If not, they may give you some slight idea of that wonderland which lies beyond those dim blue shapes which you may have seen on a clear day hanging between sea and sky on the far northern horizon.

SO get out your atlas and let us be going. I warn you this will not be the languid and exotic cruising of the south. After all, we are hardy Northerners, and all we need is a tight little ship which can nose its way among the rocky islets and lie snugly at anchor in the narrow creeks and harbours which our fathers knew.

The sun is high overhead as we pass the Mull of Kintyre with its lighthouse dazzling white against the grey rocks and here and there bright green patches of bracken like emeralds set in antique silver. Fair Head and Rathlin grow mistily blue as we reach the Sound of Islay, where the Paps of Jura stand like great grim fortresses guarding the gateway to the north. By contrast with these desolate barren pyramids the fields of Islay look green and smiling and its whitewashed farmhouses cosy and welcoming.

As we leave the Sound the air suddenly freshens with the cool keen breath of the northern seas. Just hereabouts I once saw a whale dive right under the ship, so let us go forward and keep an eye on the swirling waters.

AWAY in front are our dream islands, the Isles of the Sea, floating in a haze of soft amethyst light. To thread our way through them is to make a voyage in fairyland for it is with a complete sense of unreality that we anchor off Mull with the glory of the sunset all around us.

And this is an unforgettable sunset, with the deep blue mountains of Mull outlined against a paler blue sky rich with flying banners of crimson and gold. Gradually the heavens take on the appearance of a mirage of surpassing beauty, becoming a sea of faint turquoise dotted with innumerable cloud islands rimmed with feathery breakers of shining gold. Here, if anywhere, are the Isles of the Blest—O'Brazil and Heart's Desire—for imagination runs riot in the long, mystic twilight of the north where the luminous green that follows the sunset has scarcely faded when the rose of dawn steals across the morning sky.

From the Sound of Mull take a long, backward look at the myriad blue islands and headlands gradually emerging from the grey mists which coil and curl about their summits like live things. A kindly isle is Mull with prosperous farms and wooded hillsides. Near the northern extremity is Tobermory with its lovely land-locked bay. Each grey house seems to climb up a little higher than its neighbour, till they are all looking over each other's shoulders at the Mishnish Hotel on the sea front. And indeed it is well worth looking at, for there you can get the best tea and scones in the world and maybe see Harry Lauder at the next table as well.

And now we are out of the Sound, but not out of the islands. When you hear that there are nearly 500 of them altogether you will not ask their names. Those three on the left you can see so clearly are Muck, Eigg, and Rhum. At one time they supported, in meagre fashion, some thousands of people. But since the beginning of the nineteenth century they have been gradually losing their inhabitants by enforced emigration till now there is scarcely a house on their lonely slopes.

We are heading straight for the Cuillins of Skye, those magical mountains whose loveliness and grandeur are the inspiration and despair of poet and painter. If you could take the purple of the rainbow, the indigo of the storm-cloud, and the pure cobalt of the noonday sky, and mould them into spires and pyramids three thousand feet high afloat on a shining ocean you might hope to recapture their colour and form.

But here is Loch Skavaig, and there is the very ridge of rock where Walter Scott landed. If we scramble over it we can see Coruisk, the wonderful lake hidden in the heart of the Cuillins. To-day the shadowed water gleams like black polished marble at the foot of the sharp splintered peaks that pierce the sky, and every ledge and cranny is outlined so clearly that you can pick out the spot where the golden eagle has his eyrie But should a sudden storm break over the mountains the swollen torrents pouring into the loch would churn up the depths to white fury and "the cauldron" would foam and boil till it justified its name.

TO-NIGHT we shall anchor at Broadford and if the fair weather holds we may see an afterglow on the Cuillins which is not so much a magnificent spectacle as a profound emotional experience.

Towards sunset tiny flecks of cloud, like the scattered petals of a thousand roses flung across the western sky, float upward from the horizon into the shining blue. Then, as the sun disappears, the mountains grow cold and remote till, suddenly, the air is filled with a liquid crimson light and the great peaks flush and glow in its radiance till they look like some splendid altar set up among the crowding islands which, in their rich purple robes, kneel upon the waters to do obeisance. For a few brief moments the whole world seems transformed. But the light is quenched and the glory fades as the spirit of night flits over the waters of the loch.

We cannot leave Skye without seeing Dunvegan Castle, the ancient portion of which has walls ten feet thick which have stood firm for a thousand years and a doorway on to whose threshold the Vikings of the fort used to leap from their beached galleys. There, hanging on the wall, is the fairy flag which has played its part in all the legends of the MacLeods. Go through that narrow door and you will find yourself in the dreadful dungeon into which daylight never shone; open, if you dare, that sinister trap-door which has heard the last cry of many a captured foe.

The glens and marshes through which we are driving now once sheltered Prince Charlie and his few faithful followers. In that little sheiling with its thatched roof held down by stones live the descendants of one who supplied him with food. In this very room in Portree he bade farewell to Flora MacDonald, the Highland girl to whom he owed his life.

IT is a grey morning as we sail over the Minch to Stornoway, a name that suggests a pennon flying free on the world's last outpost. Yet Stornoway itself is disappointing, an up-to-date town "built on" to the Isle of Lewis like a modern doorway on a mediæval castle.

But let us pass through the doorway for in the remote interior of the island we shall find a people who have remained practically unchanged during a hundred generations. Here is one of their queer little dwellings, with double dry-stone walls, no chimney, and two tiny windows peering from the thatch like dark frowning eyes under shaggy eyebrows. The inside consists of three compartments, one for the animals and two for the owners. But we shall not call lest we be regarded as intruders for the Lewis folk are dour and have no love for strangers.

The wild, haunted moors are desolate and there are many small sullen lakes. Away on the west coast we shall find at Callanish the "standing stones" of a civilisation 3,000 years old and, strangely enough, a horned cairn similar to those of ancient Ulster. If you are sensitive to atmospheres Callanish will fill you with terror.

So let us sail down to Tarbert, the home of the Harris tweed, where a friendly hospitable people will invite you into their homes to see their hand-looms and tell you how they make their dyes of heather, and blue iris. The tweed itself you can examine freely, for there are bales of it lying out on the ditches in all weathers.

But the wind has changed and the mists are blotting out one island after another. As we sail towards Skye the veils of gossamer float down from the Cuillins, and before we have crossed the Minch again "the fairy-painted hills and yellow sands" are hidden under their folds.

NEVER do the Hebrides yield all their loveliness to you on one voyage. Lest you grow too familiar with their elusive charm they lure you on only to escape from you by turning into grey ghosts that steal out of the mists, keep you company for a while, and then slip silently away.

I wish I could have shown you Staffa, and taken you into Fingal's Cave to see the other end of the Giant's Causeway, for of course Fingal and the Giant are one and the same!

And Iona. Yet I could but point out the wild grandeur of its setting. The real Iona, the something that strikes men dumb as they watch the ruins of the great Cathedral rising from the sea, that you must sense for yourself. Every cross and stone bears testimony to what Columba did for Iona, but who can measure what Iona did for him?

Gradually the mist becomes suffused with sunshine, and now it is drifting across Islay like a luminous cloud. The stronghold of Jura stands aside to watch us pass, and the Antrim coast draws near.

We must bid farewell to the Hebrides. Unless, indeed, "the far Cuillins have put a spell on us" so that nevermore shall we see the northern sky on a June evening without dreaming of the enchanted isles.

M. E. Morton.

London Day By Day

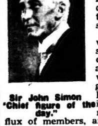
LONDON, Saturday.



Sir John Simon "Chief figure of the day."

LONG years ago I remember an occasion when Mr. Amery was at the Dominions Office and when he was much gratified by the influx of members who came in to listen to the fag end of his speech.

Colonel Ropner was in much the same position yesterday. Between him and Mr. Amery there was, however, a great difference. The latter was quite ignorant of the real reason for the influx of members, and was tempted to regard it as a somewhat tardy recognition of his own eloquence. Colonel Ropner did not make this mistake.

He knew M.P.'s had rushed in to hear Sir John Simon on the Anglo-German settlement, and with the best grace in the world he gave way to the principal figure of the day.

In a House unusually sensitive to its privileges in view of the Sandys case this week Sir John was garlanded with praise for making the statement to the Commons before giving it to the newspapers.

Devil's Island.

THERE is a snag in the decree of the French Ministry of Justice abolishing the hated Devil's Isle. The decree adds that prisoners who are already there will remain and complete their sentences, and as many of the prisoners who are deported to this penal settlement are "lifers" it is likely that the island will continue to earn its grim reputation for some years to come.

Prison reformers the world over will, however, rejoice that the end is at last in sight, for in spite of the attempts of the authorities to improve living conditions in modern times, the climate and geography of the region have combined to frustrate their good intentions.

The decision to abolish the settlement is believed to be partly due to a series of articles written by a French journalist who, at considerable risk to his health, obtained the Government's permission to make a prolonged stay on the island, and obtain first-hand experience of the life of its unhappy inhabitants.

Devil's Island has figured frequently in fiction, but this is another case where facts have been even more lurid than fiction, and South America will be well rid of it.

Two Years to Live.

THE Rev. Leslie Weatherhead minister of the City Temple, who became ill early this year through overstrain, will resume his Ministry next Sunday week. Lord Horder recently told him—"I will give you two years to live at your present rate of living." He has been ordered to "go slowly," and he will not resume his full ministry until later in the year.

Formerly of the Brunswick Methodist Church, Leeds, the Rev. Weatherhead succeeded Dr. F. W. Norwood, as minister of the City Temple in 1936. He served in the Great War as a combatant officer in the Indian Army, and was afterwards employed in the political department. He has spoken strongly from the pacifist platform, and has taken up the cudgels against critics of the Victorians on several occasions.

He has been a very popular minister, and on one occasion queues began to form outside the City Temple at five o'clock in the morning, and many people were turned away as the church was packed to capacity. He has broadcast many times from the pulpit of his friend, Canon "Dick" Sheppard, at St. Martin's-in-the-Fields.

At a Price.

AT a cost of close on £1,000 an acre an open space not entirely lacking in beauty, has been saved to suburban Londoners by the Middlesex County Council. The purchase has been concluded by the Council, after months of negotiation, of the West Middlesex Golf course at Hanwell. The price for the 167 acres was £14,500 plus an additional £3,000 for legal costs.

The club, of some 450 members, is one of the oldest in London, and is but nine or ten miles from Marble Arch. It is dominated by the great high structure of one of the master-pieces of the famous Engineer Brunel, whose audacity in spanning steep valleys with tall structures made possible the main Great Western Railway line.

The deep valley at Hanwell through which the River Brent winds its way to the Thames, was the first great obstacle which confronted Brunel and railway engineers when they planned the line to the west. Brunel built up the tall spidery brick pillars which seem to stride across the valley, banked up the railway line and ran his viaduct across. Beneath it there is now a recreation ground and the West Middlesex Golf course, and the river, which worried Brunel, now worries golfers as one of the best natural hazards which could be found on any course.

Just "Props" To Him.

JACK Hinds makes no claim of knowledge concerning entomology. Behind a desk which has five telephones which ring incessantly, Hinds sits in the property department at a London film studio. He is in charge of property rentals.

Since insects must be rented, purchased, or captured outright, he is the "bug man" of the studio. Recently the director telephoned Hinds. "Jack," he said, "we've got to have 500 mosquitoes at a time throughout the production of 'Yellow Jack.' (The story of the fight against yellow fever in which Robert Montgomery starred.) Can you get them?"

Hinds despatched wires to various Southern United States cities, Mexico, and Central America, and before long enough lava was despatched to give Hinds a start. Mosquitoes live only two days, so Hinds had to institute a regular incubating system so that every other day a new supply of mosquitoes would be available until the picture was finished.

Hinds has secured boxes of ladybirds, hives of bees (simple, but much harder to handle), enough big red ants to devour a leg of lamb, beetles of all kinds, spiders, butterflies, and even the common house fly in quantity. But not spiders. When spider webs are needed a man named Roy Cordish has a machine which makes more webs in an hour than a spider can in a lifetime.

Hurricanes Over Paris.

IF a squadron of hurricanes—surely there is no need to quote them after the welter of publicity that has accompanied the very brave efforts of these machines—fly over to Paris this week-end they will easily lower the London-Paris time record.

Squadron-Leader J. Gillan has already flown from Edinburgh to Northolt, a distance of 327 miles, in 48 minutes, giving an average speed of 408.75 m.p.h. This, as he would be the first to admit, was done with a very strong tail-wind, but he should be able to fly with his squadron from Northolt in a time that would give a very good idea of a time schedule in 1942 perhaps, for the London-Paris run.

In the last few years the R.A.F. has gone ahead quicker, I believe, in its development than France, and it will no doubt be a very fine advertisement for British aviation generally if the hurricanes arrived at Villa-Coublay in record time even in comparison to the fast time achieved by American airliners on the Croydon-Le Bourget route.

Spreadeagled.

IF you had seen Mr. Loftus just half an hour before he made his speech in the House of Commons yesterday you would have thought he was asleep. Of course, he was not. He was meditating.

But I have never seen a man meditate in such a curious attitude. Quite literally he was spreadeagled over a large section of the Front Government bench below the gangway, and he only assumed a different position when another M.P. got too near his outstretched arm. But that Mr. Loftus was very much awake and had all his wits about him was apparent from the moment when he got upon his legs. He made a good speech—as, indeed, he always does.

Famous London Preacher. Doctor's "Death Sentence."

Sir Francis Acland.

FOR some time I have been aware that Sir Francis Acland was not in the House of Commons, but the reason for it escaped my curiosity until the fact was referred to by Captain Euan Wallace.

After that I made inquiry, and I learned that Sir Francis has had a breakdown. Fortunately, he now appears to be well on the way to recovery, but it is curious how you may miss a man and not think of the significance of his absence. Sir Francis has always been so hale that the idea of him being ill does not come easily to the mind.

Trinity House.

NOT many years ago a play was written to show how ancient foundations had ceased to perform the functions intended by their pious founders. Trinity House is perhaps the one exception.

It retains its old uses, and in the course of the centuries has gone on adding new ones to it. It controls pilotage, lighthouses, and buoys and—finds certain skilled persons who perform important functions in the administration of justice.

In addition to that it administers charities. In fact, it does so much that the suggestion of a high authority that it gets its name from some Trinitarian purpose seems a little far fetched. Nor can it be said that the name comes from the fact that it meets on Trinity Monday to choose its master and wardens.

The truth is that the original charter of Henry VIII., given when the Corporation was established at Deptford, is called "The Guild of the Fraternity of the Glorious Trinity of St. Clement's." The day of St. Clement is in November, but I have been baffled in my attempts to find out what his "glorious and undividable trinity" was.

BELFAST POLICE COURTS.

R.M.'S CRITICISMS.

OUTSPOKEN REFERENCE.

LACK OF ACCOMMODATION.

"Now that this case has concluded so far as this Court is concerned, I would like to say that it has been instrumental in showing in bold relief the utter inadequacy of the accommodation provided in these courts.

"The taking of depositions necessitated the assistance of a third resident magistrate to fill my place in the Custody Court, so that the ordinary business could be disposed of.

"I had to conduct my court for the greater part of that time in a small room 15 feet by 18 feet.

"I do wish that those responsible for the provision of public courts in this city could have seen how witnesses, prosecutors, press, policemen and the accused were all huddled together in this makeshift court."

These comments were made by Mr. J. H Campbell, R.M., at the conclusion of the hearing of the series of conspiracy and false pretences charges in the Belfast Custody Court on Friday.

Proceeding, Mr. Campbell said in that great commercial centre of theirs was being conducted the preliminary investigation of a case involving thousands of pounds and the production of dozens of documents and the calling and recalling of dozens of witnesses, all to the complete exclusion of the public, who were entitled to be present if they so desired. But there was not even room for the witnesses, who had to be brought in one at a time.

MORE ROOM IN A BARN.

The holding of a Court under those conditions was a disgrace to those responsible, and tended to reduce what ought to be a serious and dignified proceeding to the level of an illegal court in a barn—with the exception that there would be more room in a barn. It was high time there was some plain speaking, as private representation had no effect, and it was high time the citizens bestirred themselves to get the accommodation they were entitled to in their Police Courts.

"Facts are stubborn things," observed Mr. Campbell, "but it may amaze the public to know that the number of cases dealt with by my colleague (Mr. W. F. M'Coy, R.M.) and myself last year was 47,742, involving the presence of something like 190,968 persons per annum, or 612 per day."

When the volume of work was considered, added his Worship, it would be realised at once that the court accommodation was wholly inadequate for present conditions. From the hygienic point of view it might surprise people to learn that there was no female lavatory accommodation in the central building, and how that escaped the attention of the Medical Officer of Health was difficult to understand.

There could be no justification from a financial point of view, because since the coming into operation of the Summary Jurisdiction Act of 1935, which increased the work and jurisdiction of these courts, the annual amount of fines paid to the Belfast Corporation increased from £3,149 6s 8d some years previously to £9,289 1s 8d in 1937. That sum was not stationary, but was still on the increase.

JUVENILE COURT A SCANDAL.

In conclusion Mr. Campbell said he would like to add that the provisions made for the holding of the Juvenile Courts were a scandal. Tiny children were bundled into the Custody Court, where they saw for the first time very often a criminal dock, which they ought not to see except in the last extremity. There was no shelter for the children in inclement weather, except they were brought into contact with a view of the cells. It was time the Corporation cleaned up their Augean stables.

U.S. "G"-MAN DISMISSED.

SEQUEL TO SPY INQUIRY.

Leon Turrou, a "G"-man, who a few weeks ago was highly praised for his share in the detection of German spies, has now been dismissed from the Federal Bureau investigation, his resignation having been rejected.

His discharge follows protests by the Government authorities, including a personal observation by President Roosevelt, arising out of a contract that Turrou had signed with a newspaper to write a series of articles alleged to contain startling revelations on the recent espionage investigation.

SOUTHERN VISITOR AND QUEEN'S.

"COLONIAL COLLEGE."

WHAT HE SAID IN IRISH.

LARGE TECHNICAL SCHOOL.

The speaker was Mr. Seamus O'Neill, M.A., who spoke on "University, Technical School, or no School."

Speaking of Queen's University, Mr. O'Neill said that it was merely a colonial college. No one could say that it was an Ulster institution for it could not be Ulster if it was not Irish. It fulfilled the function of a large technical school and the complete lack of cultural development in the Six Counties was proof of this. The Ulster Protestants refused to believe that Ulster had any history that went back beyond Dolly's Brae or the Siege of Derry.

Mr. J. Buckley presided and Mr O'Neill was thanked for his address on the motion of Mr. P. J. Nolan, University College, Cork.

MAN'S BRAINSTORM.

THREATS AT BUS STATION.

"I'LL SLASH YOUR HEADS OFF."

Sword threats at a bus station by a man who declared, "I am the son of Zacharias from heaven, I'll slash your —— heads off," were described at Horsham (Sussex) yesterday.

Commenting that the Bench had come to the conclusion that what he did was connected with a brainstorm, Mr. N. P. Oddie, chairman of the magistrates, placed on probation for two years Robert Kilburn, an ex-miner from South Shields.

Appearing on remand, he pleaded guilty to doing damage to the Southdown Motor Services bus station at Crawley on June 24 to the extent of £2 10s, maliciously damaging a police uniform to the extent of £2 5s and assaulting P.C. Marchbank.

Dora Docking, a waitress in the restaurant of the Southdown coach station, said that when the Brighton to London bus arrived at about 2 p.m. Kilburn, who was a passenger, asked for a cup of tea. She got it for him but he told her to take it to him as he was sitting at a table, adding, "You will bring it to this table or I will stick this sword in you." Kilburn went over to the counter with a naked sword in his hand and she took the tea to him but he refused to pay the 2d for it. He also threatened with the sword a lady and her husband who tried to reason with him.

Arthur Pitt Appleton, of Ifield, Crawley, said that Kilburn stuck a sword through a window and demanded that he (witness) should drive the bus. "I tried to explain to him that I was not a bus driver and he then went round the back and later I heard the glass of the front door break," he added.

Mrs. Elizabeth Gatford, the mangeress of the restaurant, described how she went to tell the driver and the conductor of the coach, but they went out of the way. "I then went back," she went on, "and got all the waitresses and passengers under cover, but there was one more waitress who was just about due to arrive and I was going to warn her as she came in when the man came after me with his sword and said, 'You are the first to have this sword through you.' I managed to get into the office and close the door and then I heard him walk away."

P.C. Marchbank said that when he arrived with two other police officers Kilburn waved the sword wildly towards them saying, "Stand back you; none of you shall touch me. I am the son of Zacharias from heaven." He continued to wave the sword, threatening to kill them, and shouting "I'll slash your —— heads off."

When Kilburn lowered the sword for a moment they overpowered him. The constable added that in doing so the sword cut his tunic pocket, and also his hand and left leg.

When charged Kilburn replied, "I meant to kill you. I never thought a policeman could take me with my sword."

Mr. P. G. Eager, defending, said that Kilburn had been indulging in sunbathing, and the only explanation that could be given was that he was temporarily mentally upset.

Mrs. Kilburn, of John Clay Street, South Shields, told the magistrates—"No mother ever had a better boy, and he has never given me a moment's anxiety at all." She was quite prepared to take him back home, and be responsible for him.

Kilburn was placed on probation for two years with his mother as surety, and was ordered to pay damages and costs, totalling £5 17s by weekly instalments.

WE CAN CONQUER GAS.

SAYS A.R.P. INSPECTOR-GENERAL.

The gas menace can be defeated, said Wing-Commander Hodsoll, Inspector-General of A.R.P., speaking in Manchester yesterday.

"I believe our preparations against this particular menace are as good as, if not better, than any other country in the world," he added.

Speaking of experiments being carried out, he said that it was hoped to be able to distribute soon for demonstration purposes a dummy mustard bomb which would spray liquid on bursting and give the effect of an actual gas bomb.

A manual on gas detection was in proof form, and he hoped to have gas detectors trained in every city.

GOVERNMENT ACTS TO SAVE FLAX.

HOME PRODUCE GRANT.

MINISTER'S STATEMENT.

GENEROUS OFFER TO TRADE.

It was announced to-day by the Minister of Commerce, Right Hon. J. Milne Barbour, that in response to many representations the Government had resolved to support the flax industry by making the very substantial grant of £9 for every pound that the industry was prepared to expend in such a manner as might be considered best designed to extend and improve the supply of grown flax. This grant will be continued for a period of three years, and is subject to a limit of £50,000 in any one year.

Mr. Barbour was speaking at a luncheon in the Grand Central Hotel when he and the Minister of Finance, Rt. Hon. J. M. Andrews, entertained the members of the newly-formed Flax Committee prior to the holding of the first formal meeting.

The Flax Spinners' Association was represented on the committee by Messrs. E. S. Clarke, D.L.; J. Gillespie, and J. Houston.

Senator H. Duff, J.P., and Mr. Jas. F. Gamble, J.P., M.P., represented the Ulster Agricultural Organisation Society, Ltd., and Mr. W. M'Collum the Scutch Millowners.

The Linen Industry Research Association had as its representative Lieut.-Col. O. B. Graham, D.S.O., and the Belfast Society of Chartered Accountants Mr. Herbert Quin, Barrister-at-Law, F.C.A.

Addressing the committee Mr. Barbour said that as long as any of them could remember they had had to witness a steady dwindling in the home-grown supply of the raw material of the predominant industry in Northern Ireland.

Of all branches of the great textile industry of the United Kingdom, the linen industry alone was capable of being supplied with home-grown raw material, and yet not only had the acreage under flax diminished to a mere fraction of what it at one time was, but those engaged in its cultivation had not reaped the profit from its growth on a scale to which they considered they were entitled.

VALUE IN EXPORT TRADE.

In addition to the large amount of employment afforded in the manufacture of linen, its value in their export trade and assistance in commanding foreign credit was of considerable importance, but in the supply of materials required in national defence, flax occupies a prominent place.

So for some years past representations had been made continually to the Government from farmers, spinners and those interested in the provision of employment that some action should be taken to put the various sections of the industry into better condition.

Many efforts had been made in the past, but recent developments, some on a very large scale, had taken place in other countries in the way of selection of seed, modernising retting and scutching, which had left this country rather behind in flax growing. The saving of the valuable seed was hardly attempted, and spinners complain that in the better steeping and greater uniformity, and above all the handling of the crop, there was great room for improvement which would afford a better price to the farmer and superior fibre to the spinner.

To the committee, continued the Minister, was entrusted by the Government the responsible task, upon the successful accomplishment of which the employment and prosperity of so many in our Province depends, of determining and establishing means of effecting permanent improvement in the quantity and quality of their home-grown flax.

The Government was prepared to repose in them unrestricted confidence and discretion. The grant was being made untrammeled with any conditions.

The Government did not predicate that the extent to which they were prepard to help was likely to be more than that what might be required, or whether an even larger sum might be necessary, in which case they considered that those likely to benefit should feel sufficiently encouraged by this large measure of Government assistance to supply themselves such extra finance or continuance of support as they might consider required and justified.

SELF-SUPPORTING BASIS.

The Government felt it was unnecessary to remind them of the vital consequences dependent on this endeavour, undertaken in response to representations of the trade. It was really to solve the question, "Can flax be satisfactorily and remuneratively produced in Northern Ireland?"

If all the permissible expenditure be made it should be so expended as to leave the cultivation of flax upon a permanently self-supporting basis.

While the members of the Committee were drawn from various sections of the trade, the Government hoped the broad view as to what might be best for the trade as a whole might be the guiding consideration, and not any desire to secure special advantage for any one particular interest.

Right Hon. J. M. Andrews also spoke to wish success to the Committee, the various members of which then expressed approval on behalf of their representative interests at the steps being taken by the Government to increase the home-grown flax supply.

It was stated that the spinning end of the trade had expressed its willingness to undertake the responsibility for the entire amount of the new flax development fund which the Government required to be subscribed by the trade, hoping that this would avoid the placing of any additional burden on the flax-growers themselves.

BELFAST AND SWIMMING.

ALDERMAN ON FACILITIES LACK.

Alderman T. Henderson speaking on the minutes of the Baths and Lodging-House Committee at Belfast Corporation said they were a hundred years behind the times as far as swimming facilities were concerned.

He added that it was time they had modern baths.

THE ESTATE OF "GREY OWL."

MAY AMOUNT TO £20,000.

TORONTO, Friday.—The estate of "Grey Owl" from his writings and lecturing career may reach the neighbourhood of 100,000 dollars (£20,000) from English, United States, and Canadian sources, according to the "Toronto Star."

"Grey Owl," the famous Canadian Indian lecturer, author, and naturalist died on April 13.—Reuter.

BRITISH COAL BILL.

THE LORDS' AMENDMENTS.

The Lords' amendments to the Coal Bill are to be considered in the House of Commons next week. These are many in number, but there are four that are crucial. About all but two it is possible that a compromise may be arrived at.

The exceptions are—

(1) The amount of the total compensation to be paid to the coalowners; and

(2) The date at which mineral rights are to be transferred to the State.

The first of these questions was the subject of a finding by a tribunal which the coalowners agreed in advance to accept.

The second is not susceptible of compromise, because the valuation of the rights to be transferred depends upon the date of transference.

It is, therefore, expected that the amendments dealing with these two matters will be rejected by the Commons.

There is the possibility of a clash between the two Houses, but is not expected that this will materialise.

BABY'S TRAGIC END.

THE LIVERPOOL BURNING.

When a youth who was alleged to have made a statement that he tied a sleeping baby in an armchair by the fire and then forced the gas meter and learned later that the baby had been burned to death, appeared on remand at Liverpool yesterday, two additional charges were brought against him.

He was Samuel Burrows (18), described as a labourer, of Erith Street, Liverpool, who on Saturday was accused of having stolen 4s 8d from the gas meter at his house.

The additional charges alleged that Burrows wilfully neglected and exposed Irene Lydia Burrows, aged 11 months, in a manner likely to cause her unnecessary suffering and that he allowed Irene Lydia Burrows and Harold Carter Burrows, aged 2 years and 11 months, to be in a room with an open fire grate not sufficiently protected by a fire guard.

Mr. J. R. Bishop, prosecuting, said that he proposed to proceed on the first two charges, and the Magistrate (Mr. Stewart Deacon) remanded Burrows in custody until Tuesday, and granted legal aid.

Mr. Bishop said that the two children were left in charge of Burrows, and through his alleged neglect the younger child was burned to death, and the other child was exposed to the risk of burning.

BELFAST WOMAN GETS DIVORCE.

JUDGE HOLDS CRUELTY.

HUSBAND AND CARVING KNIFE.

In Ulster Kings's Bench Division on Friday, the Lord Chief Justice heard a petition by Margaret Fleming, Cavehill Road, Belfast, for a divorce a mensa et thora, the respondent being Malcolm Fleming, a butcher, of Antrim Road.

The grounds of the petition were alleged cruelty and misconduct.

Mr. James M'Sparran (instructed by Messrs. Biggar & Strahan) represented the respondent.

Mr. Edmond Warnock, K.C., M.P., with whom were Mr. J. D. Chambers, K.C., and Mr. W. W. B. Topping (instructed by Messrs. W. L. Skelton & Co.), for the petitioner, said on November 6, 1937, a petition was filed by Mrs. Fleming. Originally it was for cruelty alone, but on April 27, 1938, his Lordship gave authority to amend the petition by adding an additional allegation of misconduct.

The parties, Counsel said, were married in St. Mark's Church, Dundela, on March 24, 1913. There were issue of the marriage three children, all boys. The marriage was not happy, but it was tolerable up till 1920.

Her husband was a man of violent temper and bad tongue. In 1920 when they resided in Whitehouse he came home one day shortly before their youngest child was born and threatened to cut her throat. He took a knife and chased her out to the garden and she was in a state of terror.

Some six years ago there was a dispute in their house in Belfast and he caught her and put her down on the floor. One of the children had to rush down for one of the employes and get him to come to her assistance. On another occasion when she was putting some clothes on the line he knocked the chair from under her.

In another scene he threatened to cut her throat. On another occasion they had a row over the whitewashing of a window in the yard. In 1938 it came to the knowledge of Mrs. Fleming that her husband in 1931 had committed misconduct with a domestic servant in his house in Donaghadee.

COUNSEL FOR RESPONDENT.

Mr. M'Sparran, for the respondent, said originally in these proceedings there was an affidavit made alleging cruelty against the respondent. Respondent put in an answering affidavit denying the various allegations of cruelty. No answer was put in by the respondent in regard to the allegation of misconduct in the amended application. His client was not prepared to attend court and to go into those matters and that being so he was not prepared to resist the allegation of misconduct. Counsel, however, desired to make it clear that his client did not agree with all the allegations that had been made by Mr. Warnock in his opening statement.

Petitioner, in the witness box, bore out her counsel's statement and said that on November 2, 1937, she left her husband.

His Lordship—When your husband threatened to cut your throat did you believe he was serious in his threat?—Yes.

Did his actions and words on those occasions put you actually in fear of your life?—Yes, very much.

Did they in any way affect your health?

Witness replied in the affirmative and said she had a nervous breakdown.

THE LORD CHIEF JUSTICE.

His Lordship said he was satisfied on the evidence as regarded the cruelty. It was established beyond the question of yea or nay. That was not a case of one act or that was something that was the outcome of undue haste or temper.

There were repeated acts of cruelty spread over a large number of years, and on more than one occasion a carving knife or other instrument of that character was used. It was quite apparent that there was full justification for the petitioner believing those threats against her life. As regarded the misconduct, his Lordship thought the case had been proved.

BEES DELAY RESCUE WORK.

AIRMEN MAROONED IN FOREST.

PARIS, Friday.—Owing to the hostility of bees the crew of three and the three passengers of a French mail 'plane marooned in a dense forest in the Unbangi (Shari district of French Equatorial Africa) are only able to work at night to clear sufficient ground to allow rescue 'planes to land.

The ill-fated machine, which had left Fort Archambault for Bangui, was forced down on Wednesday, when it ran out of petrol after being driven off its course by a violent storm. Another 'plane of the Air-Afrique Line dropped supplies, blankets and tools to the marooned party to-day. With the aid of natives from three neighbouring villages, to whom messages were also dropped, a clearing will be made.—Exchange.

THE "LIVE COALS" CHILD

HANDED OVER TO WAIFS SOCIETY.

Negotiations were concluded yesterday to place in guardianship of the Church of England Waifs and Strays Society, Dennis Parrack, the eight-year-old Brighton boy whose father was alleged to have made him pick live coals from the fire as a punishment.

The father has been fined £25 and dismissed from the R.A.F.

While negotiations affecting the boy's future have been in progress, he has been cared for at the Warren Farm Schools at Brighton. He will enter one of the Society's schools and remain there until he attains the age of 14, when he will probably be transferred to a suitable vocational school run by the society.

Parrack must pay his £25 fine by to-day in order to avoid serving three months' imprisonment in default.

POLICE COURT INQUIRY.

SUPERINTENDENT'S STORY.

WHAT ONE MAN TOLD HIM.

Thos. Hough, Lorrha (Co. Tipperary), was charged at Birr Court yesterday with having maliciously set fire to a dwelling-house known as Portland House, valued at £1,500. He was charged jointly with others not yet in custody.

The house had been given to an institution in Dublin, and was to be used as an auxiliary to the Dublin House for keeping Protestant children.

John Wm. Densmore, superintendent of the orphanage which was to be started at Portland House, said on May 10 at about 2-30 a.m., he heard knocking at the hall door of the house. When he went to see what it was someone said to him, "Come down if you don't want to go up in smoke." He then dressed himself and went down, and at the door found a body of men. One of them presented a revolver and said: "Hands up." Witness waved his hands above his head and said that he was unarmed.

The man said "That is right, and witness then dropped his arms. The man then said "Clear out; we have come to burn down the place." The men then rushed past him into the hall and into different parts of the house. He did not notice anyone carrying anything except the man who was the leader. Witness went upstairs and assisted his wife in getting the children dressed and bringing them down to the lawn.

While he was in the house another man constantly exhorted him to hurry up, saying "You are proselytisers. You pick up Roman Catholic children off the streets of Dublin and make Protestants of them."

Witness said to the man that he had never done such a thing in his life, and the man said "We have no time to argue." As they went out to the lawn witness noticed that the drawing room was on fire, and the place was completely ablaze inside fifteen minutes.

As the house was burning one of the men came over and said that he did not suppose witness would pray for a man like him. Witness said to him he had just been praying for the men who had burned the house because they did not know what they were doing. The man then shook hands with him and said "Good-bye and God bless you."

The hearing was adjourned until Friday, July 29, the accused being admitted to bail.

DUBLIN CITY MARSHAL

TO APPEAL AGAINST SENTENCE.

The Dublin City Marshal, John Shaw, was sentenced to two months' imprisonment and disqualified from driving for two years in the Dublin District Court on Friday on a charge of being drunk in charge of a car.

He was detained on March 31 following an accident at Westland Row, Dublin, in which a cyclist and a woman were knocked down.

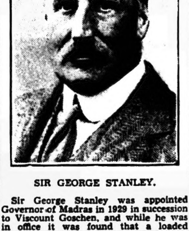
Charges of dangerous driving and failing to stop were dismissed.

Notice of appeal was given.

SIR G. STANLEY DEAD.

BROTHER OF THE EARL OF DERBY.

The death occurred yesterday in a London nursing home of Lieut.-Col. the Right Hon. Sir George Frederick Stanley, Lord Derby's brother.



SIR GEORGE STANLEY.

Sir George Stanley was appointed Governor of Madras in 1929 in succession to Viscount Goschen, and while he was in office it was found that a loaded revolver had been concealed in the Governor's box at the Legislative Council.

He was Unionist member for Preston from 1910 till 1922 and represented East Willesden subsequently.

In 1921 he was Financial Secretary to the War Office, and afterwards served as Under-Secretary to the Home Office and Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Pensions.

He was mentioned in despatches for his services in the Great War and made a C.M.G.

WITH BOY SCOUTS.

THE CAMPING SEASON.

REMINDER AND WARNING.

WORLD CUB CONFERENCE.

Not many weeks ago everybody was talking about the rain, not because there was plenty of it, but simply because of the lack of it. And, when rain eventually did come after the long spell of fine, dry weather, even townsfolk joined with the farmers in whole-hearted welcome. Now the reverse is very much the case. Everyone, not excluding the farmers, would not grumble one whit if the rain chose to stray off to somewhere else for a period. "A Scout laughs in the rain." This happy slogan has been over-worked during the past few week-ends, and Scouts, 8th Scout law notwithstanding, are beginning to wonder if they are to be condemned to a summer of wet skies and sodden earth. Stick to it, Scouts, better weather is surely just round the corner. You'll probably be laughing about those wet week-ends before the close of this month.

Here are a few camping reminders. You can check your kit with the list. Don't leave gates open and let animals stray. Don't chase cattle. Never cut wood without permission. Don't crash about in woods and startle game—keep to the path unless you have been given use of the wood for Scouting games, and then move quietly. Never miss an opportunity to do a good turn to the landowner or local inhabitants. Leave your camp-site exactly as you would wish to find it. Don't forget to thank your host. Examine and overhaul your gear before you leave. Check your gear from this list now, and don't leave things to the last minute. You will need a rucksack, groundsheet, 2 blankets (or sleeping bag), pyjamas, soap and towel, toothbrush and paste, hairbrush and comb, raincoat, sweater and warm jacket, footer shorts, spare stockings, spare vest and shirt, spare shoes and canvas shoes, handkerchiefs, enamel plate and mug, knife, fork and spoon, needles, thread, buttons, etc., boot cleaning outfit, bathing costume, writing paper and pencil.

BEWARE OF ACCIDENTS.

To avoid boating and bathing accidents Scout headquarters have made certain rules which will make these fine sports safe. No Scout is allowed to bathe in water out of his depth unless there is some responsible person present. The safety of the place must first have been ascertained, and the provision of a life-line is essential. A picket of good swimmers must be on duty (in swimming attire) with overcoats on, and they may not bathe until all the others have left the water. For boating, each Scout must be able to swim fifty yards in shirt, shorts and stockings, except on stretches of water which are not dangerous and are nowhere deeper than three and a half feet. Sailing is not allowed unless under the charge of an experienced person. Never bathe directly after a meal. At least an hour and a half interval after the meal should be allowed.

Rev. H. A. M'Kegney, District Commissioner for Londonderry, will have charge of the British contingent of Scouts to the Lithuanian National Jamboree. He leaves with about a dozen Ulster Scouts for London on Monday. The camp is being held from July 8 till 18 to celebrate the twentieth anniversary of Lithuanian Independence and the foundation of the Boy Scouts' Association of Lithuania.

Dublin Boy Scouts' Association held their annual Rally in Lord Iveagh's grounds last Saturday afternoon. The Earl of Buckinghamshire, Headquarter's Travelling Commissioner, was the inspecting officer and addressed the boys. During the Rally there was a presentation of medals awarded by the Chief Scout and the Association trophies. Belfast Cubbers will be pleased to learn that Cubmaster J. Boyd, 8th Dublin Clontarf Pack, received the Medal of Merit. Cubmaster Boyd is well-known in Belfast for his good work in connection with the Wolf Cub inter-city visits.

WORLD CUB EVENT.

Forty-five men and sixty-seven women from 24 countries are to meet at Gilwell Park, London, for the first World Wolf Cub Conference ever held. The conference will last for five days. Considering this will be the first world conference, it will be exceedingly well represented by Wolf Cub leaders of the following countries—Belgium, Denmark, Egypt, Finland, France, Holland, Hungary, Japan, Luxembourg, Norway, Poland, Russian Scouts, South Africa, Switzerland, Canada and other Dominions and colonies.

On Wednesday of last week four "survivors" of the original Scouts' Camp, held at Brownsea Island in 1907, attended a reunion luncheon at the Imperial Headquarters, London. Sir Percy Everett, Deputy Chief Commissioner, who had assisted the Chief Scout to run this experimental camp 31 years ago, presided, and the other three in attendance were Mr. Arthur Primmer, Mr. Herbert Watts and Mr. Reginald Giles. Since 1907, nine of the original members have died, seven of them being killed in the War, and seven have gone overseas.

Wolf Cub Frank Matthews, aged 10, of the Holy Trinity Springfield Group, Chelmsford, has been awarded the Gilt Cross in recognition of his gallant attempt to rescue a small boy from drowning in a canal. The water was 16 feet deep, and though the Cub could not swim he pluckily jumped in to the canal to rescue the boy. The unfortunate boy was pulled out by his own father and all efforts to revive him failed.

PUSHING OF ULSTER GOODS.

GOVERNMENT'S WORK.

MR. CLYDE AND SUCCESS.

MR. STEWART AND FUNDS APPEAL.

A glowing tribute was paid to the Ulster Government for the manner in which they made every effort to assist the development of industries, and assisting the push Ulster goods campaign by Mr. S. G. Haughton at the annual meeting of the Ulster Industries Development Association at the offices, Bedford Street, Belfast, on Friday.

Mr. Haughton said they were living in an age of intense competition. Some people were bitterly critical of the Government, but the Government was making a most genuine effort to do everything humanely possible to help Ulster industries. (Applause).

Mr. J. A Cleland, D.L., president, who presided, proposed the adoption of the report, and this was seconded by Mr. Robert Clyde, J.P., who said they had been successful because of the fact that they had stuck religiously to the aim they had from the commencement, their object was to increase the sale of home produced goods, and in that they had been eminently successful. He added that they required the co-operation of shopkeepers and housewife to make the campaign really successful. In conclusion, he paid tribute to the services rendered by their president, and expressed the hope that Mr. Cleland would remain for many years at the helm. (Applause).

The statement of accounts was submitted by Mr. H. H. Stewart, who in appealing for funds to allow of their expanding the work, said:

"It is deplorable that there are so many manufacturers unquestionably benefiting from the activities of the association who have not yet been induced to contribute towards the association."

Mr. Stewart added that such people were perfectly willing to reap the harvest towards the sowing of which they had not contributed any seed. Concluding, he said 50 per cent. of their income was expended on advertising, which was the strong suit in the work done by the association.

Mr. R. K. L. Galloway, O.B.E., seconded and the report was adopted.

On the motion of Major F. C. Wallace, D.S.O., Messrs. R. Clement Wilson and S. S. Corbett were re-elected members of the council.

Mr. Cleland was re-elected president; Mr. Clyde, vice-president; Mr. H. H. Stewart, hon. treasurer, and Mr. James Duff (jun.), J.P., hon. secretary, on the motion of Mr. Haughton, who spoke of the manner in which Mr. Cleland had directed the fortunes of the association.

Mr. W. J. Irwin, a new member of the association, complimented the council on the work they had accomplished.

Mr. Cleland gave an extensive review of the affairs of the association which is published in another column. In conclusion, he paid tribute to Major Henderson, their secretary-organiser, and referred in glowing terms to the work done by their assistant secretary and their Press representative, Mr. R. J. Frizzell.

'PLANE WRECKAGE IN SEA.

BELIEVED R.A.F. MACHINE.

The tail of an aeroplane—believed to be a Royal Air Force machine—has been picked up near Duncansby Head by the Aberdeen trawler Stromness.

The wreckage, which was handed over to the Receiver of Wrecks at Aberdeen, had apparently not been long in the water.

JEWISH CONSTABLES DIE.

JERUSALEM, Friday.—Two Jewish special constables died to-day from wounds received in recent disturbances.

One, Abraham Katz (30), who came from Jeppestown, Johannesburg, in 1935, was wounded in May while defending the Jewish colony of Hanuta.

The other, Haim Ziporgi, was wounded in a flare-up between Jews and Arabs eight days ago.—Reuter.

BELFAST OFFICIAL'S RETIREMENT.

Mr. James Anderson, branch manager of the Commercial Union Assurance Company, Limited, Belfast, retired on the 30th ultimo., when he entertained his staff to dinner in the Merrythought Restaurant.

Several members of the staff paid tribute to Mr. Anderson's services, and at the conclusion opportunity was taken to hand over to him a token of esteem from the staff.

Mr. Anderson has been honorary secretary and a past president of the Insurance Institute, whilst he has also had the honour of being examiner for the Chartered Insurance Institute and the Canadian Bank of Commerce. His services in the insurance profession extends over 46 years, 42 of which were spent with the "Commercial Union."

He is succeeded by Mr. P. B. Sherwood, who has been in the company's service for 25 years, the last 17 of which have been spent at Blackburn as local manager.

He Married The Wrong Woman

"CONCORD IN JEOPARDY." Doris Leslie. (Hutchinson, 8s 6d.)

THE only discordant note to be found in Miss Doris Leslie's excellent worthy title. The theme is not a new one, but out of the age-old story of the artist in conflict against materialnew novel is the unfortunate and unism, the struggle of his spiritual self to find expression in spite of the limitations which the mere fact of living imposes upon it, Miss Leslie has written a psychological study that is sincere and moving.

In one sense it is the story of a successful failure—of genius prostituted for the sake of the easy money that mere cleverness can earn. "Concord in Jeopardy" is a long, effortless, biographical novel of the boy, born of humble parentage, who becomes a famous cartoonist and commercial artist, and only after his early death achieves the fame which could have been his due in his lifetime.

INFLUENCE of Three Women

Alexander Concord is the only child of a poor dressmaker who stints herself to give him a good education above his class so that eventually he can follow a profession. He fails to win the Cambridge scholarship which should have crowned her efforts, and to her sorrow and disgust decides to study painting.

After studying in London he moves to Florence, marries the wrong woman, and finds himself forced to devote all his time to the cartoons which bring in quick money so as to support her. When at last he meets the other woman who can inspire him to find his soul again it is too late; war has broken out and he is killed.

Concord's story is the story of the influence exerted over his emotional temperament by these three women: his too possessive mother, his uninspiring wife, and the woman he loves. Into this conflict of emotion Miss Leslie has introduced contemporary events and delightful subsidiary characters, with a wealth of incident and detail combined with skilfully created atmosphere, that combines to make a fine and satisfying novel.

Women Recall Their Youth

"MYSELF WHEN YOUNG." The Countess of Oxford and Asquith. (Frederick Muller, 12s 6d.)

THE Countess of Oxford can always be relied upon to produce interesting and stimulating writing whenever she makes use of that facile and provocative pen which has assured for her such an appreciative public.

In "Myself When Young" she has compiled an especially engrossing anthology by inviting women who have in different ways left their mark upon this century to contribute cameos of their youth. These fragments of autobiography—a dozen or so—written by "women of influence and achievement," in themselves make a revealing commentary on feminine progress and emancipation in the past 30 years.

INTEREST to Ulster Readers

It is a mark of distinction in itself to have been chosen by so discerning a critic as Lady Oxford to contribute to these memories, and she has gathered together as catholic and representative a group of personalities as could be found.

Including Lady Oxford herself, famous in several spheres, they range from the stage to the pulpit, from politics to pilots, Suffragette and dress designer, society hostess and authoress. The inclusion of the Marchioness of Londonderry gives the volume a special interest for Ulster readers.

"Myself When Young" should please all those who take delight in "collecting" celebrities.

THE DOCTOR'S CORNER.

Rules for Bathers.

NEVER bathe except in the company of one or more experienced swimmers.

Do not enter the water when you are overheated, otherwise dangerous collapse may occur, and, of course, never bathe in less than an hour after a meal.

On no account stay in until you are shivering and your teeth are chattering. A short bathe is much more stimulating and refreshing than a long one.

It is unforgivable to pretend that you are in distress. Genuine signs of distress have been mistakenly ignored on several occasions with tragic results.

The APPLE-WOMEN

Six-Minute Story No. 5 by H. A. MANHOOD

DAY after day, all through the long, hot summer, the two old women sat together at one end of the green-painted shelter facing the sea, sharing the small luxuries. a few sweets maybe, an orange or a soft bit of cake, which one or the other brought, and enjoying the laughing briskness of the holiday crowds, forgetful of their own sorry age and ailments.

They were very poor and shabby in their dress, very old and forgotten by their kin living like mice in tiny back-street rooms which the sun never entered.

Meeting by a miracle of chance—the dead husband of one had once served the other with bread in a London suburb—the shelter between the piers had become a chapel to them, a kindly holy place from which life, out of which they had so nearly slipped, was viewed with a sympathy and mellowness which had been impossible in their old state of loneliness

Together

SITTING there together, bonneted heads nodding harmoniously, they seemed to absorb a measure of the merry vigorous life passing before them, reviving so that words and laughter came easily and their minds held light and shade and the beginnings of poetry once more.

Sometimes the seat was occupied when they came and for a time they were forced to sit apart, mildly indignant that any should rob them of their one pleasure. But the moment the seat was empty, up they pottered, hampered by their heavy skirts but strong in their eagerness, umbrellas tapping loudly so that it seemed as if Time itself was anxious too and was holding its breath. A sighing and creaking and down they sank gratefully.

"My! I thought they would never go."

And they would nod contentedly, utterly at peace, and one would polish clumsy, ancient spectacles while the other loosed the laces of her crumpled boots. Comfortable at last, they'd produce their little treasures of food from their jet-beaded bags, laugh over them like children, and hide them gleefully away, to be shared later.

Softly then they talked, exchanging memories, pitying the crippled riders in bath-chairs, laughing when a laughing group passed, anxious when a child fell or one of the beach ponies pranced alarmingly.

Happiness

SO they spent day after happy day, enthroned on that hard wooden seat, never noticing its hardness. Often they blessed the great luck that had brought them together and wondered why they had been chosen for such happiness. As the season advanced they came earlier to the shelter to be sure of a place.

Greatly they admired the patterned flowers in the sunken gardens, their old eyes blinking gratefully towards the massed colours many times through the day. Sometimes they were fortunate enough to possess a fine flower of their own, as on the day when a child flicked the heads from two fine sunflowers in passing.

"It seemed such a pity to let them lie there, so I just took them."

They smiled understandingly at each other, the sunflowers in their laps, their ungloved hands folded quietly about them. In the beginning they had worn gloves throughout the day, but lately there had seemed a wrongness in the wearing and they had come to love the touch of breezes on their dry, wrinkled skins. One day—why not?—they were going to paddle down on the sandy spit where the children flew their brilliant-coloured kites, but they were hardly young or daring enough yet. A little more peace and companionship and they would be ready for anything.

Then there was the never-to-be-forgotten day when a large, handsome apple rolled from a trotting hawker's cart and was brought to the shelter to be polished and admired. Their toothless mouths watered at its rosiness, and they decided recklessly to eat it, chumble it as well as they could, when the afternoon steamer returned to the pierhead.

Others came to the shelter and went again; a mother with her child, which made them think of their own children now dead and gone; two nuns, exchanging addresses from collection books, which made them shake their heads and wonder why some should choose to spend their lives balanced on a knife-edge; a very fat man and his very thin wife, which made them smile exceedingly indecorously perhaps, although they did not need to breathe the reason why, and, lastly, there came a young girl, very shy and beautiful in her fresh white dress.

Inspired

THE presence of the girl pleased the old women deeply. Looking at her they were refreshed, inspired even. They would have liked to talk to her, to have glimpsed the lovely hopes in her mind. But they were shy, too, aware of their own ugliness, and knew that she would not relish their prying. They would have felt the same at her age.

So they whispered to each other and wondered why she sat alone when she should have been the pride and bride of a fine young man.

Musing so, one of them sucked and bubbled, suddenly, nodding towards the bright green railings of the promenade. There leaned the very young man for so nice a girl. Tall and serious-faced, he was looking admiringly, longingly at her and he reddened under his tan when he saw that the old women had noticed. But still he could not help looking at the girl.

"A nice boy," the old women murmured and wondered how to work a kindly miracle. One of them, pondering, quivered suddenly and whispered excitedly to the other, and, presently, the way being clear, the apple rolled from her lap, rolled sweetly to the very feet of the young man. Neatly, but frowningly, he picked it up, stepped across: "I believe. . . ."

The young man hesitated, breathed deeply and approached the dreaming girl.

"If you will allow me. . . ."

"But it must belong to you . . . . there's no one else."

Smiling

THE young man placed the apple in her lap She stared down at it, then back at him as he waited. The old women were peeping, smiling.

She stood up confusedly, the apple in her hand. The young man thought that he had never seen such loveliness and grace before. His heart began to sink, then rose again.

"Thank you, thank you, very much," she was saying.

The sun seemed brighter and the sea and sky more brilliant as she said it.

"But if you would like it," she whispered.

"Only half," the young man said.

She gave him the apple. He felt for a knife, nodding boldly towards the beach.

"Much nicer down there. . . ."

Slowly they went away. The old women smiled delightedly

"Such a very nice day," one of them said, and for the rest of the day they sat like queens, forgetful of age and poverty, proud to feel that they were still of some use, that they were still part of the power and glory.

THIS WEEK'S WINNER

One of the finest snaps yet submitted in our Week-End Page picture contest, the entrant is Mrs. E. Morrison, of 15 Hawthornden Drive, Belfast, to whom goes the prize of half-a-guinea.

Next week another 10/6 awaits the entrant of the best happy snap of a child or children. Address entries to "Childhood Photograph Competition," Belfast Telegraph, Royal Avenue, Belfast, to arrive not later than first post on Wednesday, July 6, and enclose a stamped envelope if you want your snap returned.

When next you are snapping the children take especial care with an extra picture or two — get the youngsters smiling, enjoying themselves, and yours may be the snap chosen for publication on this page

Surname Sidelights— KEITH

KEITH is a really Scottish surname with a remarkable history. Two important Keiths fed it. One was the ancient Banffshire parish noted for relics of druidical times; the other the old town of Keith, celebrated as having one of the greatest fairs in the kingdom.

When the surname began no one can say because the record of Keiths takes us back to remote times when records were most imperfectly kept. The story goes that in the days of Malcolm the Second a young warrier so distinguished himself in defence of Scotland as to lay the foundations of the greatness of the family of Keith, which, under the title of Earl Marischal, long held sway in Buchan.

THIS Keith put the Danes to flight, but his claim to the glory was disputed by another officer. The King decided that the rivals should decide the issue by single combat, and the Keith won. Whereupon King Malcolm dipped his fingers in the blood of the fallen claimant and marked the shield of the victor with three bloody strokes, and gave him the motto, Truth overcomes. The bloody strokes and the motto thereafter became the armorial bearings of the Keiths. It is the family name of the Earls of Kintore. This goes back to Sir John Keith who was created Baron Keith and Earl of Kintore. He was also made Hereditary Knight Marischal of Scotland as a reward for his signal services in saving the Royal regalia from the vandal hands of Oliver Cromwell.

• • • •

ONE of the most extraordinary chapters in the history of the surname would be of the two Keiths who played an important part in Germany. There is a Keith monument in Berlin, and there was a Keith regiment in the German Army. This was in honour of James Keith, who became a Field Marshal of Prussia and was said to have been one of the finest soldiers who fought under Frederick the Great. Then George Keith, the Earl Marischal of Scotland, was successively Prussian Ambassador to Paris and Madrid.

• • • •

ACCORDING to Lockhart, it is Mrs. Murray Keith who appears under the name of Mrs. Bethung Baliol in the name of Mrs. Bethune Baliol in the Chronicles of the Canongate, and he held this to be unsurpassed among Sir Walter Scott's writings.

Sir William John Keith, who was born at Portobello, spent his life in various high offices in the Indian Civil Service and was Acting-Governor of Burma.

A PLAIN MAN'S SERMON

People Who "Want To See"

WE live in the age of science; and the watchword of science is enis increased and made more accurate. quiry. It makes it its business to example, to analyse, to explain. It seeks to know the why and the how of everything in the universe. It is thus that the sum of human knowledge is increased and made more accurate.

With the diffusion of scientific inforspirit of enquiry, the desire to question and to have everything explained, should have spread to public mind. And this is all to the good, provided that we are careful to remember that there will always remain certain regions of human thought and experience which are incapable of scientific analysis and explanation. One of these is the realm of religion.

We shall remember that St. Thomas was the disciple who wanted to have things proved and explained to him before he could believe. "Unless I shall see," he said, "I will not believe." And in this attitude of mind he is representative of a great number of people who want to see. mentally, the why and the how of everything which they are asked to believe.

There is a passage in Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan," where, at her trial, she says to the Grand Inquisitor, "But I do not understand," and she receives the answer, "My child, the blessed Athanasius has laid it down that those who do not understand must be damned." That you must understand everything in order to believe is a misconception which haunts the minds of a great many people.

THE MIND Defeated

ST. Paul is perfectly right when he reminds us that there are certain things—which he calls "the things of the Spirit of God"—which cannot be grasped by "the wisdom of men," because they are spiritually discerned.

The word "science," in its modern meaning, had not been coined in St. Paul's day; but if we substitute for his expression, "the wisdom of men," what we call nowadays "the scientific method," we shall mean the same thing as he does. For he means that human logic and reasoning are not the means by which spiritual realities are apprehended; but that they are discerned instinctively by a spiritual faculty, which God has given us, and which is not only entirely trustworthy, but, as a matter of fact, more trustworthy than our mental faculties, which are largely useless for this purpose.

There are, in short, certain things which, because, in the very nature of them, they are incapable of definition or explanation, we had much better be content to leave unexplained and undefined. In other words, there are some things which, if they are explained too much, are ruined in the process.

For instance, there is your mother. Your mother is to you, I hope, a very beautiful factor in your life, which God has made known to you. She also contains an immense amount of mystery.

You can, if you wish, insist on having your mother explained to you. A scientist will analyse her for you into the various cells, corpuscles, phosphates and hydrates of which she is composed. But, in demanding to have her explained to you, you will find that they have destroyed her as a mother and turned her into a chemical formula, which is of no use to you whatever.

In the same way, you can demand to know how a flower is made. To do so, you will have to tear it to fragments, and when you have done that, you will find, to your dismay, that you have no flower left.

You would, of course, do far better to drink in its beauty, inhale its perfume, and leave it at that; accepting it at God's hands as a very lovely thing which He has made for you and given to you—something which He is offering to your soul and not to your intellect.

SCIENCE Becomes a Bore

SO, when you are thrilled with the almost unimaginable glory of a sunset, which leaves you with the undefined conviction that somewhere there exists Eternal Loveliness, of which you have caught some tiny glimpse, you will have no use at all for the scientific bore who explains to you that really it is just the result of innumerable and incredibly swift vibrations, and thereby converts it from a message to your soul into mere dry-as-dust facts for your intellect. Your spiritual instinct about it was right and true; of that you are quite, quite certain; and you feel you want to say to him, "Oh, do for goodness sake, leave it alone, and spare me your intolerably dull explanations."

It is just the same as it is with the beauty of a work of art or the loveliness of a great piece of music. Explanation is useless and superfluous. You either see the beauty, or you do not: you are either carried away by the music, or you are not. The beauty, the harmony are—to use St Paul's words—"spiritually discerned" by your soul. Explanation would only spoil them for you; you do not want them explained. Their explanation lies in the impression which they make on you.

So it is with the things of God. It is a question of an impression made upon your soul; not of something understood by your intellect. Once you have become aware of the presence of God; once you have seen the loveliness of Christ; once you have felt the truth of the message contained in the Gospels, you want nothing more explained. You just know!

REV. L. B. ASHBY

SECRET INFORMATION

BREACH OF PRIVILEGE DEBATE

LORDS AND THE COAL BILL

EARLY next week the Commons Select Committee, which is to inquire into matters which some fear are threats to liberty in Britain, will meet for the first time in the Committee Room at the House of Commons (writes the Press Association Lobby correspondent).

THREE THINGS TO INVESTIGATE.

The committee of fourteen M.P.'s, representing all parties, has three things to investigate:—

(1.) The statements of Mr. Duncan Sandys about what occurred when he put down a Parliamentary question containing secret information.

(2.) The action taken by the Ministers concerned—Mr. Hore-Belisha (Secretary for War) and Sir Donald Somervell (Attorney-General).

(3.) The general position of M.P.'s under the Official Secrets Act, and such questions as whether they are or are not entitled to use secret information in their Parliamentary duties and the public interest.

SITTING IN PRIVATE.

Most, if not all, the Committee's sittings will probably be in private. All those concerned in the case—which has been the main political topic of the past week—are expected to give evidence.

Sir John Gilmour will probably be elected chairman of the Committee. When—within three weeks, it is thought—it makes its report to Parliament there will be a full debate immediately.

Time may be found next week for a debate on the report of the Committee of Privileges, which found that the Military Court of Inquiry committed a breach of privilege in asking Mr. Sandys to come before it and give evidence as to how he obtained his secret information.

The "breach of privilege" occurred because Parliament was going to consider whether an M.P. could be compelled to divulge where he found information, but before this was settled the Military Court were asking Mr. Sandys to disclose his sources of knowledge. That was wrong, because none can go "above the head" of Parliament in these matters.

Any debate on this point will be very restricted in view of the Select Committee's inquiry, which is pending.

A Lords v. Commons battle will rage on Wednesday and Thursday over the amendments which their lordships have put down to the Coal Bill.

PURCHASE OF ROYALTIES.

This complicated Bill—which proposed in four years' time to buy all coal mining royalties for a total price of £66,450,000—has gone back to the Commons drastically altered.

One amendment would defer the buying of the royalties for a much longer period. This will be hotly opposed by Labour, who argue that the royalty owners want to go on drawing royalties as long as possible before being bought out. It is probable that the Government will refuse to extend the buying out date, and it is also fairly certain that they will not agree to any amendment which would increase the total of £66,450,000 to be paid for the royalties. On the other hand they may accept the Lords' amendment regarding the subsidence of property. Compensation points will cause much argument.

There are many other aspects to be re-debated. When the Commons have dealt with all the Lords' proposals, accepting some and rejecting others, the Bill will be returned to the Lords, who, it is hoped, will show an accommodating spirit and allow it to be passed before the end of the month.

LOAN TO TURKEY.

Plans for Britain to lend £6,000,000 to Turkey, so that that country may purchase armaments in this country will be considered on Monday, when the Anglo-Turkish (Armament Credit) Agreement Bill comes up for second reading.

Dr. Hugh Dalton for Labour will not disapprove of the Bill, but he will take the opportunity to disapprove quite a lot of the Government's general foreign policy. Liberals will not oppose the Bill.

As it provides more money for milk for babies and expectant mothers, the Milk (Extension and Amendment) Bill should get its second reading without much hostility from Mr. Tom Williams (Labour) or Mr. Richard Acland (Liberal).

To complete an amicable night Mr. Wedgwood Benn will not object to the third reading of the Essential Commodities Reserves Bill, which provides for the buying of stocks of wheat, oil, and other things in case of war.

Better fire brigade services for Scotland may be asked for by Sir Archibald Sinclair at the report and third reading of the Fire Brigades Bill—embracing many reforms—on Tuesday. Mr. Graham White and Mr. Westwood will also speak.

The Imperial Telegraphs Bill receives third reading the same night.

UNDERMANNED SHIPS.

Alleged under-manning of British coasting trade ships will be discussed by Mr. Arthur Greenwood and Mr. Shinwell when the estimates for the Mercantile Marine Services is considered on Friday. Mr. D. O. Evans will be the Liberal speaker. A lot may be heard about the inordinately long hours which some seamen are said to work.

Several interesting subjects will be raised in the Lords. On Monday Lord Lamington will ask the Government whether any promise had ever been made to a Zionist organisation, officially or privately, for the creation of a Jewish State prior to the appointment of the Royal Commission. Lord Lloyd is bringing forward the same point.

Miss Ellen Wilkinson's Hire Purchase Bill will be in committee on Tuesday, and on Wednesday the Earl of Mansfield will call attention to the advantages that would ensue if Cabinet Ministers were able to address either House. He will propose an investigation into this idea, but it is not known how some already hard-worked Ministers would relish the prospect.

FAMILY ALLOWANCES.

The Bishop of Winchester will on Thursday point to observations in the recent report of the Unemployment Assistance Board on anomalies and problems which arise from the insufficiency of wages to meet the primary needs of many households with children. He will move that a committee inquire into the proposal for a national policy of family allowances.

MURDERED IN BUSY STREET.

"FILM TOWN" DISCOVERY.

FIVE BULLETS IN MAN'S BODY.

A murder as "perfect" as any staged by a film studio has been discovered in one of Hollywood's busiest streets, states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" correspondent. King Grey (42), a well-known film cameraman, was found dead in his car, which was parked outside a post office.

He was lying over the steering wheel, and there were five bullets in his chest. One hand clutched a letter signed "Babe," which addressed Grey as "Dear Daddy."

No money or jewellery had been stolen, and there was no trace of a revolver.

80-YEAR-OLD WOMAN

GOING TO LIVE IN LIGHTHOUSE.

Mrs. Betsy Ann Sharples, an eighty-old widow, of Park Road, Darwen, ashire, sailed from Liverpool on ay on what she described as a new of life.

Sharples, who was formerly a er, embarked on the Duchess of B rd accompanied by her daughter, Annie Fish, aged 60, who for 32 has been keeper of Nootka Lighton the coast of British Columbia. mother will live with her in the use.

TEACHER ATTACKS WIFE WITH AXE.

FOUND GUILTY, BUT INSANE.

David Eiran Llewelyn, 45-year-old senior English master at Ludlow Grammar School, was found guilty at Shrewsbury Assizes on Friday of wounding his wife, Florence Amelia Llewelyn, with intent to do her grievous bodily harm, and of attempting to commit suicide by inhaling coal gas.

Llewelyn was found not guilty of feloniously wounding his wife with intent to murder, and also of charges of feloniously wounding Ursula Mary Hotchkiss, his step-daughter.

Mrs. Llewelyn stated that on the afternoon of April 18, with her daughter, Miss Hotchkiss, and her husband, she went to a club, and they returned in the evening quite good friends. She went to bed about ten o'clock. In the small hours of the morning, whilst in bed, she felt a blow on the head, and then saw her husband in the room with something in his hand, which afterwards she found to be an axe. He left the room, and went into that of Miss Hotchkiss. She followed him and held on to him. She and her daughter struggled with him, and secured the axe.

Dr. Mackenzie, of Shrewsbury Prison, and Dr. Humphrey, of Birmingham Prison, agreed that Llewelyn did not appreciate the gravity of what he had done.

It was stated that Llewelyn had fought in the war, and received severe injuries, after twice being blown up. Since then he had suffered a great deal from depression.

THEATRES AT A GLANCE.

ROYAL CINEMA.

The comedy-mad Ritz Brothers are starred in "The Joy Parade," a musical hit featuring Joan Davis, Tony Martin, and Gloria Stuart, at the Royal Cinema next week. The film contains all the elements for a gay, entertaining hit—hilarious laugh lines, lovely girls, and catchy songs, with the three Ritz Brothers at their funniest. The cast also includes Fred Stone, Nat Pendleton, Jed Prouty, Maurice Cass, Marjorie Weaver, and J. C. Nugent. Also showing will be "Born Reckless," with Rochelle Hudson and Brian Donlevy.

BELFAST HIPPODROME.

Walter Wanger's "Vogues of 1938," produced in Technicolour, heads the programme at the Belfast Hippodrome next week. Warner Baxter, Joan Bennett, Helen Vinson, Mischa Auer, Alan Mowbray, and Jerome Cowan are included in the cast. The high light of the film is a superb fashion show with music, songs, and dancing, but there is a strong story. The second feature, "Navy Blue and Gold," has Robert Young, James Stewart, Lionel Barrymore, Florence Rice, and Billie Burke as stars.

RITZ THEATRE.

A varied double-feature programme will be presented at the Ritz Theatre next week. "Everybody Sing" is a new musical feature with Allan Jones, Fanny Brice, and Billie Burke. It is a mad whirl of comedy, humour, and catchy songs. The second feature is "Trapped by G-Men," in which the subject is given a new and refreshing angle. Wynne Gibson represents the feminine side of the service as the G-woman partner of Jack Holt. Joseph Seal at the organ will provide another of his popular interludes

CLASSIC CINEMA.

Miriam Hopkins and Ray Milland are starred in a modern romance, "Wise Girl," which heads the Classic programme next week. The father of a noted Manhattan heiress, Miriam Hopkins, attempts to get custody of her dead sister's two children. They are being kept by their youthful uncle. Miriam sets out to help her father to get the children, but when she falls in love with the guardian the story takes another turn. A Tom Walls comedy, "Second Best Bed" is the second feature, and the popular Leslie Simpson is at the organ.

CRUMLIN PICTURE HOUSE.

An action-packed drama, "Men of Steel," starring Grant Withers and Beatrice Roberts, tops the programme at the Crumlin Picture House for the first three days of next week. The manager of a steel mill and the owner's son, who returns from school to learn the business, don't see eye to eye until a double romance changes their outlook. For the latter three days the attraction will be "There Goes My Girl," starring Ann Sothern and Gene Raymond in an amusing newspaper story.

THE ALHAMBRA.

The Alhambra are again to the fore next week in presenting the Louis v. Schmeling fight film. The entire fight is presented in slow motion, which will enable patrons to witness Louis's terrific two-fisted attack on Schmeling. The picture programme for the first half of the week has Arthur Tracy, the Street Singer, in "Command Performance," and at the end of the week Robert Wilcox in "Armoured Car."

ROUND OF THE THEATRES.

NEXT WEEK'S FEATURES.

Another sparkling revue, "Paradise on Parade," comes to the Empire next week. There are 19 scenes with Teddy White, famous Lancashire comedian, heading a strong cast. At the Picture House, Royal Avenue, next week, will be screened "Music for Madame" (Joan Fountaine and Nino Martin), and in support "Salute to Romance." The Imperial will have "The Awful Truth," another delightful Irene Dunne comedy, all week. Also showing "Federal Bullets." At the Strand and Majestic for early week will be "The 13th Man," and in support "The Man from the Big City." The week-end attraction is "Leave It To Me," also "The Gold Racket." Jessie Matthews in "Gangway" is the principal early-week attraction at the Coliseum. The week-end brings "Navy Blues." The Belfast star, Errol Flynn, is in "Another Dawn" at the Troxy early next week, and for the latter half, "Danger—Love at Work," and "One Mile From Heaven" will be shown. Next week at the Savoy is "Girls' Dormitory" for the first three days; while the mid-week change, Robert Taylor and Barbara Stanwych in "His Affair." The Forum Cinema will have a topical attraction in "I Cover the War" for early week; supporting is "When Love is Young," and the week-end attraction will be "After the Thin Man." To the Tonic, Bangor, for the first half of next week comes "Riding on Air" (Joe E. Brown), also "Armoured Car," and at the week-end, "That Certain Woman." Midnight matinee on Friday, in aid of Bangor Hospital. Concurrent at the Astoria, Capitol and Regal all next week will be "The Firefly," with Jeanette MacDonald and Allan Jones, the story of a cabaret singer who is secretly a spy for King Ferdinand of Spain. Bette Davis stars in "That Certain Woman" at the Lyceum for the early half of next week. For the latter half the attraction will be "They Won't Forget." The Broadway has "Life of the Party" as early-week attraction, and at the week-end, "Footloose Heiress" and "Trouble at Midnight" will be shown. "One Night of Love" (Grace Moore and Tullio Carminati) comes to the Clonard Picture House for the first half of next week, and for the last three days Frank Capra's masterpiece, "Lost Horizon," will be shown. The Apollo (Ormeau Road), for the first three days of next week features "Rosalie," whilst for the week-end "We Have Our Moments" and "London by Night" will be screened. "The Firefly," with Jeanette MacDonald, heads the Picturedrome, Mountpottinger, programme all next week. With her are Allan Jones, Warren William and Billy Gilbert. The Windsor will screen "Way Out West" and "The Hit Parade" for early week, and the change of programme brings "Topper." The Curzon will show for the first three days, "You Can't Have Everything" and "There was a Young Man." At the week-end, "Wife, Doctor and Nurse" and "One Mile From Heaven."

The Stadium Cinema will present for the first half of next week "The Girl Said No" (Irene Hervey and Robert Armstrong), while for the last three days "Keep Fit" with George Formby will be screened. At the Park Cinema for early week will be "Michael Strogoff," the second feature being "Father Steps Out." Change of programme brings "You Only Live Once" and "Larceny Lane." "Nobody's Baby" is announced for early week at the Midland, and at the week-end the attraction will be "Love Is News" (Loretta Young and Tyrone Power). To the West End comes "Rose Marie" (Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy) for early week and "Country Gentleman" for the week-end.

THE BELFAST PLAYHOUSE.

"YES AND NO" NEXT WEEK.

The very subtitles of the acts of the above named play—if Jo had said "no"—if Jo had said "yes"—"What really happened?" suggests an intriguing and amusing theme. Jo is the pretty young daughter of a country clergyman, who, in her imagination is about to be wooed by an eligible young man whom she has met on holiday, and who is about to depart for abroad. What shall she do? Needless to say, the family are not backward in giving her advice, though it is only at the fall of the curtain that her problem is solved. The audience are given a glimpse of the delightful and amusing life in the house of the Rev. Richard Jarrow, a county vicar, where everyone seems to exist in a delicious state of muddle-headedness. The Playhouse Company are the first repertory company to perform it outside London, so patrons are assured of a pleasant and amusing evening's worth of the newest and most laughable of London comedies.

THE BANGOR ARCADIA.

THE REVUE "IN TOWN TO-NIGHT."

The attraction at the Arcadia, Bangor, commencing Monday next will be "In Town To-Night," a bright revue with a cast of 20 artistes. Topping the bill are Mark and Billy Denison, comedians, who are well known to Belfast theatregoers, and are great favourites. Supporting them are May, Jack and Buddy, the Benson Trio (Paula, Margo and Elise), Dorothy Claire, Elsie Kelly, Bob Connelll, Nigel Mackinnon, Jack Dunn and the Six Coney Islanders. The show is well dressed, staged and produced and provides first class holiday entertainment. During the season there will be midnight matinees every Thursday and other [illegible].

BRIGADE CAMPING.

900 FOR GANAWAY.

CROSS-CHANNEL PARTIES.

ISLE OF WIGHT BOYS COMING HERE.

Half a century ago camping for boys was practically unknown. It was left to William Smith and the Boys' Brigade to establish this, the best of all forms of holiday for boys. In July, 1886, Wm. Smith ran the first B.B. camp, and within ten years hundreds of B.B. camps were being held annually, and each year the total grew bigger. Then as other organisations were formed they, too, organised camps, and after 50 years the beginning made in the 1st Glasgow Company of the Boys' Brigade had grown until now thousands of holiday camps are organised annually.

Belfast Battalion camps have been run since 1904, even during the war years when so many of the younger officers were in the army and when equipment and supplies were difficult to obtain.

There have always been men of vision in the Belfast Battalion who were not quite satisfied. They wanted the Battalion to have as its own property a permanent camp site that would have many advantages over the best previously used. They wanted every boy and officer who attended camp to feel he was on his own property. And so, led by the late Rev. R. H. S. Cooper, M.A., an enthusiastic camper and President of the Battalion, the Battalion purchased a 12-acre farm at Ganaway, near Millisle, and took the first big step towards their ideal. Every year since has seen the addition of improvements until to-day the Ganaway camp site is the admiration of all who visit it, including many of the greatest camping experts in the country.

This year from July 8 till 16 900 officers, staff sergeants, and boys will spend their camping holiday under canvas at this now popular spot on the Co. Down coast.

CROSS-CHANNEL VISITORS.

This number will include a party of thirty officers and boys of the 1st East Cowes and 1st Ryde Companies (Isle of Wight). This contingent, whose presence will be most welcome amongst their Ulster brothers, will include Mr. Jack Steen, a former Lieutenant of the 44th Belfast Company, now on the staff of the 1st East Cowes Company. The Isle of Wight contingent will leave at noon on the Thursday and will arrive in Belfast via Heysham on the Friday morning.

Those attending Ganaway will include members of provincial companies, including the 1st Crossgar, 3rd Lurgan, 3rd Ballymena, and 1st and 4th Bangor Companies.

The 14th, 15th, and 77th Belfast Companies will camp from the 9th till the 16th inst. at Sunnyhurst, Blackpool. This is a beautiful spot on the south shore of the famous Lancashire resort. The officers of the camp are:—C.O., Mr. Joseph Millar, Capt. 15th Belfast Coy.; adjutant, Mr. Ernest R. Doggart, Lieut. 11th Belfast Coy.; camp treasurer, Mr. John A. Wilson, Lieut. 41st Belfast Coy.; transport, Mr. Barton Quigley, Lieut. 77th Belfast Coy.; staff officers, Mr. John Andrews, W.O. 15th Belfast Coy., and Mr. James Lowry, W.O., 78th Belfast Coy.; staff sergeants, Messrs. Jack M'Crainor, 14th Belfast Coy.; William Crowther, 14th Belfast Coy.; James M'Killen, 15th Belfast Coy.; George Russell, 15th Belfast Coy., and William Patterson, 40th Belfast Coy.; pianist, Mr. James Robinson, 15th Belfast Coy.

The 2nd and 84th Belfast Companies are travelling to Rothesay in the Kyles of Bute. Mr. H. H. M'Neilly (captain, Second Belfast Company) will be in charge of the party who will be in camp at Kilchattan Bay. This party will travel via Larne and Stranraer on Friday next. Excursions, including a visit to the exhibition in Glasgow are being arranged.

GOING TO DUNOON.

The 34th and 38th Belfast Companies are for Dunoon. The headquarters of the Argyle and Sutherland Highlanders Territorial Army is being placed at their disposal, and the First Dunoon Boys' Brigade are kindly assisting. Football and cricket matches are being played between the Irish and Scottish units during their holiday stay.

Mr. H. Curragh will be O.C. of this camping party; Mr. W. Bowman quartermaster; Mr. W. Fitzsimmons, adjutant; Mr. T. Baxter, transport officer; Mr. F. Hunter, bands' officer, and the Rev. S. Eaton, B.A., chaplain.

The 18th Belfast and Lisburn Companies will camp at Ayr and the First Larne Company are for Balrossie in Scotland.

It is hoped the weather will be kind and that happy camping holidays will be the result in this the Irish jubilee year of the Boys' Brigade.

It is regretted that owing to a transposition of figures the total strength of the Battalion did not appear correctly in last week's notes. This should, of course, be 4,515 all ranks. The total combined figure of the senior and junior organisations was given correctly at 6,185.

A visitor who is particularly interested in work amongst young people is to spend the week-end in Ulster. This is Dr. A. E. Morgan, who is making a youth survey on behalf of King George's Jubilee Trust. On Sunday he will have an opportunity of meeting 20th Belfast Company at Ganaway, and of seeing over the Battalion camp site, which is sure to be of considerable interest to him. On Monday morning he will inspect Boys' Brigade House, Belfast, and will later attend the Officers' Luncheon Club, where he will meet in a very informal and friendly way many B.B. officers.

THE CRICKET SEASON.

Owing to the rather unfavourable weather quite a number of matches in connection with the Battalion Cricket League and knock-out competitions have been held up. Secretaries are asked to get these arranged before or soon after camp. There have been many pleasant evenings spent this season at Boys' Brigade Cricket games—in no game is the team spirit better evidenced than at cricket. By the way, Hobbs, the famous cricketer, once played for a B.B. side. Perhaps there are future "stars" in our Belfast B.B. cricket teams—who knows?

The B.B. swimming practices are being continued, and are well attended. At Ormeau Baths on Wednesday next an examination for the Brigade swimming badge will be held.

AUSTRIAN LOANS AGREEMENT.

COMMONS RECEPTION.

"VERY FAVOURABLE TO GERMANY."

The announcement of the settlement of the Austrian Loan dispute with Germany was well received in the British Commons (writes the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" political correspondent). As only 10 minutes remained before the sitting ended, however, Sir John Simon was not able to give any amplification of the complicated formal statement he read out.

In consequence, members in all parts of the House were unable to grasp the full significance of the terms of the agreement.

When the statement has been carefully examined an opportunity will be sought for discussion of the details.

As a result of the settlement in principle of German liability for the Austrian State Loans, the question of possible denunciation of existing payments agreement no longer arises.

FURTHER DISCUSSIONS.

This payments agreement, it has been emphasised, is very favourable to Germany, since its terms require Germany to spend on imports from Britain only 55 per cent. of the proceeds from her exports to Britain.

Germany has consistently applied 10 per cent. of her favourable balance to reduction of debt obligations, and has devoted a large percentage to purchase of raw materials and semi-manufactured goods from Britain and Empire sources.

One of the main questions at issue in the recent discussions was the utilisation of the substantial sterling assets which accumulated in German hands as a result of Anglo-German trade.

This issue will be the subject of the "further negotiations" referred to in the Chancellor's statement.

U.S. DEMAND SAME TREATMENT.

The announcement of the debt settlement had been possible only because substantial progress has been made towards agreement on mutually satisfactory methods of employing German's surplus sterling credits.

Germany has been forced to keep in mind the fact that America demands the same treatment for her share of Austrian loans as has been accorded by the present agreement to Great Britain. Other European countries will also watch future discussions anxiously lest some share of their trade with Germany may be diverted.

These and many other factors will be considered by members before the debt settlement is debated in the House. A full statement will then be expected on the possibility of increasing the mutual trade and improving the trade relations between the two countries.

Last night such a possibility was welcomed in political circles as much as the announcement that the German representatives had agreed to accept Austria's liability. It was considered a happy sign of the possibility of improved political relations to follow.

CALL IT "GENEROUS GESTURE."

The trend of German comment on the agreement regarding the Austrian debt service is that Germany by making a generous gesture has not only paved the way to a general settlement of her international debt problem, but has eased the tension in the political sphere which might otherwise have occurred in Anglo-German relations (states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" Berlin correspondent).

In an article in to-day's "National Zeitung" of Essen, the writer says:—"The agreement is the first step towards an all-round debt settlement. This is the first time since the war that so general an agreement has been made by Germany on this subject, and it may well be the prelude to a final settlement.

It is safe to assume that the principle adopted on this occasion will lead shortly to further negotiations calculated to contribute to an increase in world trade and to general pacification in the economic field."

12 YEARS' HONOURED SERVICE.

MR. JUSTICE BROWN'S WORK

ON BEHALF OF THE C.P.A.

On Thursday evening a deputation representing the Governing Body of the Central Presbyterian Association waited upon the Right Hon. Mr. Justice Brown and Mrs. Brown at their home, Ben-Ingan, Donaghadee, to pay tribute to them and to mark their esteem at the conclusion of 12 years' honoured service in the interests of the association.

The visit was a surprise one, and the proceedings were delightfully informal.

Right Rev. Dr. W. J. Currie, Moderator of the General Assembly, presided, and, in introducing the proceedings, made reference to the work of Mr. Justice Brown on behalf of the association, and to the honoured place he held not only amongst the members of the association, but throughout the whole Church. They were met to do him honour.

Mr. David Irwin, J.P., made reference to the profound regret with which the many branches of the association's work heard of the decision of Mr. Justice Brown to terminate his period of office. He had been a president not only in name, but had taken an active interest in everything that pertained to the welfare of the association. His popularity was unique and his genius for manifesting an interest in the most humble and backward of its activities won for him a warm place. It was during the presidency of Mr. Justice Brown that the severe shock of bad trade was experienced throughout the country, and it was due in no small measure to his foresight and personal interest that the association was piloted through those trying years. They were delighted at the same time to couple the name of Mrs. Brown with her esteemed husband in those proceedings. Her co-operation and whole-hearted support in the work of the association, especially when special efforts were being made on its behalf, were services they would never forget.

GIFTS HANDED OVER.

The gifts were handed over by the general secretary, Mr. W. T. Ewing, to Mr. Irwin at whose request the Moderator made the presentation.

Mrs. Brown expressed her thanks for such great kindness, and the Rt. Hon. Mr. Justice Brown said that it was only after the most profound thought and consideration that he finally decided, and that with the greatest reluctance, to resign the presidency. He believed he was doing the right thing in the interests of the association and after giving the most careful consideration to the appeals that had been made to him to reconsider his decision he felt in all sincerity that he could not do so. He paid tribute to the office-bearers and officials. He had, he said, never worked with a more brotherly set of men and he would always treasure the fondest memories of their kindness and helpfulness in all his work for the association. His period of service had been a very happy experience, and he would never forget the friendships formed and the real joy that he found in the work. His interests in the association would continue, and it was the sincere wish of Mrs. Brown and himself that its future success and usefulness will be even greater than in past years.

Rev. Dr. W. A. Watson, Clerk of the General Assembly and a boyhood friend of Mr. Justice Brown, delighted the company with a number of happy reminiscences and paid tribute to the young people of the family.

Mr. J. C. Guiney, president of the Athletic Council, spoke on behalf of the clubs and young people's [illegible]sations connected with the association. Councillor F. J. Lavery, J.P., F.A.I., hon. secretary of the association, apologised for the enforced absence of the hon. treasurer, Mr. Samuel MacKeown.

The other members of the deputation were Sir Thomas M'Mullan, Major S. H. Hall-Thompson, M.P.; Messrs. George Hopper and J. North Pyper.

Mr. Justice Brown and Mrs. Brown entertained their visitors to tea.

THE METHODS EXPLAINED

BY HITLER'S HIGH COMMISSIONER.

The situation in Austria, which has been hidden under a veil since the annexation by Germany in March, has been clarified by the answers of the High Commissioner, Herr Buerckel, to the fusilade of questions to which he submitted himself, states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" Vienna correspondent.

The application of Nazism to the concrete problem of Austria, as explained by the High Commissioner, will enable the world to understand the Nazi creed better than ever before.

Herr Buerckel honestly believes that the almost universal plebiscite vote in Austria for union with Germany meant that nearly every Austrian man and woman accepted the union as the only possible solution for Austria. This would mean that many of them had renounced monarchical and other faiths.

"I only heard two days ago of the fighting in the Vienna streets," Herr Buerckel said. "I am still looking for traces of it. Perhaps you will tell me where to look. A few people who took too much upon themselves in the past have been sent to Dachau, but very few. If there are any more I shall deal with them in the same way.

"FAIR AND JUST."

"Herr Hitler has appointed me to deal with matters of discipline in Austria, and I shall do all I possibly can to be fair and just. People will have to do their duty and work hard, and not interfere with things that do not concern them. Stories about 60,000 Jews being sent to Dachau are sheer nonsense."

Referring to the continued imprisonment of Dr. Schuschnigg, the ex-Chancellor, Herr Buerckel said with the utmost emphasis, "We would not take £1,000,000 ransom for Schuschnigg. My own opinion is that he should be tried for high treason, because he wanted to keep Germany and Austria apart, and he used illegal methods to do it.

Regarding the report of Dr. Schuschnigg's marriage by proxy to the former Countess Vere Fugger-Czernin, Herr Buerckel said:

"The Archbishop's office says he is not married, and when you tell me you have seen the register containing the certificate of his marriage by proxy to this woman, Fugger-Czernin, I can only say that I know nothing about it.

"Such a marriage would not be legal in Germany and, in fact, I do not regard them as married. Schuschnigg has committed high treason by opposing the union with Germany which affected the lives of 7,000,000 people, and he is accordingly a criminal.

"He has a three-roomed apartment, I believe, in the building in which he is now in Vienna. He is allowed to have a radio set, but under certain limitations and control in its use. That is to say, I do not think that he listens to foreign broadcasts at all."

TROUBLE WITH JEWS.

"We knew that we should have some difficult problems to deal with when we took over Austria. The Jewish problem is among the most difficult. In a great city which has been overfilled for years with Jews who have obtained an overwhelming preponderance in industry and trade, the theatre and other branches of culture, and in every branch of public life a certain amount of time is necessary to clear them out as we intend to do.

"I apply myself a theory which I think is the most effective. I seize hold of the big offenders and lock them up, but I do not pay much attention to the little ones."

"Of course we do not want any of our own people to stand idle in the streets while Aryans employ Jews in the jobs our people ought to have. But if there are a few Jewish workers in a factory or in positions in which they cannot do any harm to other people we do not mind their continuing to hold these posts.

"My own private opinion is that Jews should be removed from all productive industry and from cultural occupations in which they might be a danger to Germany. Germans are nationalist and the Jew is international. He cares nothing for Germany just because it is German. We do not want every Jew to leave Austria immediately in the way the Jews had to leave England when Edward I. threw them out. But in four years we hope there will be very few left in all Germany."

When the High Commissioner was asked how much of their property Jews would be allowed to take out of the country if they emigrated he said, "Not more than four or five per cent. at most."

He amended this, adding, "We take 25 per cent. of their total property as an emigration tax and other taxes and costs may bring down much lower what they take away, but it is sure to be quite enough anyhow."

NOT HARSH TO HAPSBURGS.

"We are not going to be needlessly harsh to the Hapsburgs of whom there are a great many. We will be friends with any worthy Hapsburgs who are good Germans, but I myself have never met one. But we intend that the law shall confiscate the property of all Austrian Hapsburgs because their family opposed the union of Germany and Austria for 600 years and caused unspeakable mischief."

CZECHS AID SCHUSCHNIGG.

Herr Buerckels slighting references to Dr. Schuschnigg and Countess Fugger Czernin has aroused general sympathy for the former Austrian Chancellor and his fiancee in Czechoslovakia, states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" Prague correspondent.

The "Prager Mittag" expresses regret that the restrictions imposed by the political situation make it impossible to say openly what everyone thinks of a man who, asked whether Schuschnigg's friends were allowed to visit him, replied sneeringly, "He has no friends any more."

The paper adds:—

"Herr Buerckel so characterises himself by this reference to the man who, whether one criticises him or not, should be given the credit for having refused to flee in the hour of danger and so putting himself at the disposal of his enemies.

"All this is put in the shade by Buerckel's insult to Mme. Schuschnigg—or Countess Fugger Czernin—who at the moment of greatest danger, hastened to Schuschnigg's side to share his imprisonment.

TWELVE NAZI OFFICIALS ARRESTED

VIENNA, Saturday.—Herr Buerckell has arrested 12 official administrators placed by the Nazi Party in Jewish and other private businesses whose owners are classes as enemies of the regime.

MINORITIES TALKS IN PRAGUE.

DEADLOCK REACHED.

NAZI DEMANDS REJECTED.

AUTONOMY OFFER REFUSED.

The negotiations between the Government and the Sudeten-German leaders on the minorities statute have reached a critical stage, states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" Prague correspondent.

Four demands of the Henlein representatives have been rejected by the Government. The first of the rejected demands was that the "Volkstag," or general assembly of the Sudeten party, should be given legislative powers.

This, it was considered, would be the first step to the separation of the Sudeten areas from the rest of the Republic. The demand was rejected without further discussion.

The second demand was that the entire police in the Sudeten area should be placed under control of the Henlein party.

Thirdly, the breaking up of all Ministries into sections according to nationalities was demanded.

A claim for "reparation for all damages suffered by the German population since 1918" was the fourth demand rejected.

HENLEINIST REFUSAL.

These proposals included a very wide extension of autonomy in the form of decentralisation. The increased powers of local district councils and provinces are to include the election of a local president or "Starosta" to co-operate with the local prefects appointed by the Government.

This refusal was made public to-day in an article by the Henleinist leader, Herr Kunst, in the party organ "Der Rundschau."

"NO AUTONOMY."

He declares that even if the provincial councils were given law-making powers this would only mean that the Czech majority in Bohemia, Moravia, and Silesia would obtain fuller independence from Prague. It would not provide autonomy for the Sudeten German race.

As regards the delay in completing the nationalities statute, it is pointed out in official circles that the magnitude of the task of the Czech Government is not always realised abroad.

It is a matter of entirely rebuilding the framework of the State in such a way that the work will stand for centuries.

MUST SHOW RESPECT FOR SWASTIKA.

DANGEROUS SITUATION CREATED.

I learn that a condition made by Herr Buerckel, Nazi High Commissioner for Austria, regarding the visit of Czechs from Vienna to the Sokol (physical fitness) Festival in Prague is likely to cause trouble, states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" Prague correspondent.

In giving permission for the Czech Sokols to attend, Herr Buerckel made the issue of a permit for those delegates to leave Vienna conditional on their carrying a Swastika banner at the head of their detachment beside the Czecho-Slovak flag.

In the hope of avoiding incidents urgent appeals are being broadcast to the public by the leaders of the Sokols. All newspapers ask them to keep cool when they see the Swastika banner amid the Sokols, to disregard its significance, and to remember that it is the flag of a neighbouring country and therefore entitled to respect.

M.P.'S WIRE TO HITLER BAN.

BERLIN'S "EXPLANATION."

The telegram which Commander Locker-Lampson, Conservative M.P. for Handsworth, sent to Herr Hitler, giving some advice "as one Aryan to another," has not been allowed to reach the German Chancellor (writes the Press Association Lobby correspondent). In effect it has been censored and suppressed by the Berlin authorities.

Commander Locker-Lampson has now received a telegram, which states that "Berlin advises" that his telegram to Herr Hitler has been "stopped in accordance with provisions of Article 26 of the International Telecommunications Convention, under which Governments are empowered to stop private telegrams which appear dangerous to the security of the State, or contrary to the laws of the country or public order or decency."

Whether his telegram was dangerous to the State, or was banned because contrary to the law, public order or "decency," Commander Locker-Lampson does not know. He regretted, however, he said, that the lack of liberty in Germany extended apparently even to the Post Office there, which prevented the truth reaching Herr Hitler. But, he said, he is glad that his earlier protest led to a moderation, however, temporary, of persecution in Berlin.

The banned telegram advised Herr Hitler to drop all thought of colonies as long as he attacked his own minorities, and spoke of German money paying for "poison propaganda" in Palestine and anarchy in Jamaica. It accused Herr Hitler of stealing the liberty of his land.

CHILDREN'S FREE HOLIDAY.

J. O'C. SUNSHINE HOLIDAY CAMP.

Great crowds witnessed the departure of the kiddies from the bus depot, Belfast, last evening at 5-45. The children looked very happy, knowing they were going to get from a fortnight to one month's free holiday at the camp at Ballyhornan. After a very pleasant journey they were received by Mr. O'Connor and Mr. M'Cann and the officers in charge.

Mr. O'Connor, on behalf of Mr. John E. Wellwood, J.P., who was unable to attend the opening of the camp, addressed the children. He hoped they would enjoy a very pleasant holiday, and he wished to thank all who subscribed to this very charitable object, and through the medium of the Press he wished to thank the many great friends in the offices of Messrs. Glen & Co., of Glasgow, for the way they have worked to make this camp a success.

He also told the children that they had no tasks to perform; they would be taught swimming and physical culture, and that they would be looked after by voluntary medical supervisers. They would have all sorts of games to make their lives happy at Ballyhornan.

The spiritual welfare of the children will be carefully looked after. They will be taken by bus to their respective places of worship.

In his closing remarks he wished to thank the kindly people of Ballyhornan for their great kindness towards the kiddies, assisting the officers and looking after their welfare.

Mr. O'Connor also hoped that the children would return back to their homes with happy memories of the pleasant time they had.

He read a letter he had received from the Prime Minister in which he stated that "both himself and Lady Craigavon trust that it may be possible, if a suitable opportunity should arise, for them to visit the camp."

The kiddies went wild with delight when this paragraph was read to them and are eagerly anticipating the visit.

WILL HAY'S HOME DAMAGED.

The home of Will Hay, the schoolmaster comedian, in the Great North Way, Hendon, London, was struck by lightning on Friday, and part of the house caught fire.

Will Hay was working on the film, "Hey, Hey, U.S.A.," at the Gainsborough Studios at the time.

WALL STREET BUOYANCY

SOME SUBSTANTIAL RISES

LONDON, Friday Night.—The stock markets during the past week have been more or less dominated by the trend of events on Wall Street. At the commencement there was a fresh burst of strength, but as the session progressed profit-taking checked the swift up-swing maintained throughout the previous week.

For a time there was a decided pause in the New York and London market activity, which is no more than could be expected after a week of continuous rise. "Mark time" appeared to be the order, and the fact that the account ended this week tended to restrict fresh dealings. However, following renewed strong opening advices from New York on Wednesday, interest again quickly developed, this being especially noticeable in securities with an international bearing, which again moved in the upward direction.

THE FUTURE OF AMERICANS.

The strength of the American market holds well, and it is rather a pity that Wall Street will be closed on Monday. While the day to day outlook is not easy to sum up there is no hesitation in taking a favourable long view. Optimism is based on a recovery in American trade during the next three months, and this will be reflected in an improvement in the world situation. The buoyancy of Wall Street is only a means to an end, and the rise in security quotations has brought about a much better feeling in industry. This is expressed by a rapid advance in metals and commodities. They must go higher yet if the picture of prosperity is to be complete.

BRITISH FUNDS MAINTAINED

Gilt-edged stocks were quieter, but well maintained. The new National Defence Bonds rose to 1¼ prem., and there was an exceptionally heavy turnover in money to-day. There was a 48 per cent. call due on the new 3 per cent. National Defence loan which involved a payment of some £38,400,000. The Treasury Bill tenders for £45,000,000 had to be attended to. Then there were dividend disbursements estimated between £15,000,000 and £20,000,000.

HOME RAILWAYS WEAKER.

Home Railway stocks turned definitely weaker following the traffic returns for the past week, the four lines showing a decrease in gross earnings of £207,000. Stockholders are naturally becoming anxious concerning the half yearly statements, which are due in about a month's time.

AUSTRIAN 7 p.c. STRONG.

The main feature in the foreign bond section was the sharp advance in Austrian 7 p.c. on renewed hopes about the outcome of the debt discussions, whilst among overseas railways Argentine Prior Charge stocks were good, stimulated by the announcement of the half-year's arrears of interest payment on Argentine Great Western 5 p.c. and Buenos Ayres and Pacific 4½ p.c. Consolidated Debentures.

INTERNATIONALS STRONG.

Transatlantics, under New York influence, registered substantial gains. Richard Thomas issues were active. Home industrials registered some irregularity, but the undertone was quite good.

Richard Thomas issues attracted considerable attention throughout the week on reports that the re-financing plan has now been completed. The debentures rose over 10 points to 77.

It is officially announced that a scheme is in the final stages of preparation and that detailed particulars will be posted to shareholders and debenture holders in the course of the next few days.

Guest Keens fell rather sharply following the meeting, but Swan Hunters were a firm market on the raising of the interim dividend from 3 per cent. to 4 per cent.

The leading issues were generally steady.

MINING SHARES.

There has been less activity in evidence in the Mining Department throughout the past week, due partly to the minor halt in the upward swing of Wall Street on profit-taking, while business has been restricted by end-account considerations. The Cape has experienced a quiet session, and interest has been mainly centred in the established dividend payers, notably Crown Mines. The Western Rands have been neglected, and in the absence of fresh public support West Witwatersrand have dwindled. In the Eastern Rand section a small demand has developed from Joburg for Marievale and Palmietkuils. Gold quotation has declined a penny to 140s 9d per fine ounce. Diamond shares have encountered a steady demand and show some improvement on the week.

The price of tin shows an improvement of 8s 9d to £188 3s 9d, and the Share market has been well maintained and with one or two exceptions prices have appreciated a few pence.

Mawchi have been sold on profit-taking. Elsewhere Burmah Corporation have been supported, due to a good investment demand, but Van Emdens and Wilunas are reactionary.

RUBBERS' PROGRESS.

The price of rubber has spurted ahead after losing ground in sympathy with Wall Street, and although the leading Rubber shares have been subjected to profit-taking they show improvements of several pence. The commodity is now quoted 7½d per lb., a rise of 17-32 on the week.

Oil shares have not been very active, due to the absence of public demand, although Royal Dutch have been supported from the Continent.

ELECTRICITY DEBENTURES.

The Midland Counties Electric Supply Co., Ltd., belongs to the Balfour Beatty Group and, as its name implies, it serves areas in Nottinghamshire, Leicestershire, Gloucestershire, Derbyshire, and Warwickshire. Its record is one of steady progress and for the past two years the dividend has been 8 per cent.

In March, 1937, an issue of 1,000,000 £1 4½ per cent. Cum. Preference shares was made with the object of repaying advances to bankers, and the announcement is now made of a forthcoming issue of £1,750,000 3½ per cent. Deb. at par. The redemption dates are 1952 at 101 and 1962 at par. The proceeds will be utilised to repay £1,000,000 4 per cent. Deb., leaving about £750,000 new money, which will be available for the business.

WESTERN HOLDINGS NEWS.

The activity in Western Holdings has quite died down and the price of the shares remains very firm round 15s. It is said that the large "bear" account is maintaining the quotation, but this is hardly likely, as if there were a tussle in being, fluctuations would have been seen. Drilling is steadily proceeding on the St. Helena Farm and it should not be long before news comes to hand concerning the second borehole and the deflection of the first borehole. There is deep interest in this section of the Rand, and although diverse opinions may be held concerning it, the discovery of two huge reefs makes one wish that development could be hastened. The African and European Investment Corporation is arranging a drilling campaign on farms to the east of St. Helena.

HIGH YIELDING PREFERENCE SHARES.

The Union Cold Storage Co., Ltd., is largely interested in the beef trade in Argentina. It not only possesses large estancias but retail shops in Britain through which the beef is sold to the public, and it possesses other interests such as shipping. For the past ten years the company has been able to pay ten per cent. on its Ordinary shares, all of which are owned by the Vestry family, but the Preference shares are in the hands of the public. The profits for 1937 were £984,632 compared with £964,895 for the preceding 12 months. To depreciation is placed £125,000, the same as last time, and the balance forward is rather higher at £229,662. A slightly better year was experienced, but the increase in profits did not amount to much. The 6 per cent. Pref. stock is quoted in £1 units at 23s to yield over 5 per cent. and the 7 per cent. Pref. stock at 24s to yield 5¾ per cent.

DIVIDENDS AND REPORTS.

Aiders (Tamworth)—Interim dividend 4 per cent., payable July 11, against 5 per cent.

Milletts Stores—Final half-yearly dividend of 3 per cent., making 6 per cent. on 6 per cent. Cumulative Participating Preference.

H.E. Proprietary report for the year ended December 31 last states that the profit for the year amounted to £107,304 which, with the balance brought in, gives an available total of £191,550. The directors recommend payment of a final dividend of 1s 6d per share (15 per cent), less tax, making a total dividend of 25 per cent for the year. The directors have further decided to declare an interim dividend of 6d per share (5 per cent.), less tax, on account of the profits of the current year. The final and interim dividends, equal to 2s per share, less tax, will be paid simultaneously.

International Tea Co.'s Stores—Trading profit £626,043 against £680,310. The final dividend is 5 per cent., making 10 per cent. against 16 per cent. for year.

G. D. Peters and Co.—Interim of 10 per cent., less tax, on Ordinary. No interim last year.

Christy Bros.—Profit, £42,489 (£33,374): to general reserve, £15,000 (same); to reserve in respect of subsidising, £2,000 (same). Dividend 11 per cent. Forward, £26,927 (£22,838, including £4,950 profit on sale of investments).

Clyde and Mersey Investment Trust—Dividend of 5½ per cent. (same); forward, £24,899 (£22,101).

Davey Paxman and Co. (Colchester)—Dividend of 15 per cent. on the Ordinary capital for the year to March 31 last (against 7½ per cent.). Additionally the past year's distribution is payable on a capital increased in 1936-37 by a capitalised bonus of 66 2-3 per cent.

Kinta Kellas Rubber—Profit £17,934 (£18,316). Final of 5 per cent., making 10 per cent., less tax (same); forward £5,745 (£8,061).

Kinta Kellas Tin—Profit £20,887 (£12,446). Final of 10 per cent., making 15 per cent. (10 per cent.); forward, £7,754 (£2,617).

Kawie (Java) Rubber—Profit, £14,686 (£14,234). Final of 5 per cent., less tax, making 10 per cent. (12½ per cent.). Forward, £12,119 (£12,906).

Openshaw Brewery—Interim of 8 per cent. (same).

BELFAST EXCHANGE.

THE WEEKLY REPORT.

TRADE NOT BRISK: PRICES STRONG.

During the past week business on the Belfast Stock Exchange was not on a very large scale, but prices in most sections showed a good recovery and closed strong.

There was a fair amount of activity in the market for British Government securities. War Loan gained ⅛ on the week, transactions taking place at 101 13-16, 15-16, ⅞, ⅞, 11-16, 13-16, 102, 101⅞, 102, 102 1-16, and 102 3-16, closing at the last-mentioned figure. 3½ per cent. Conversion Loan was freely dealt in at 102 1-16, 102⅛, 102⅛, 102 7-16, 102 5-16, 102⅜. 5 per cent. Conversion Loan fetched 113 9-16. 2½ per cent. Consols were done at 74¼, 4 per cent. Funding Loan at 113 3-16, 3 per cent. Funding at 98¼, and 2¾ per cent. Land 1891 stock at 95¾. Ulster 5 per cent. 1950-60 marked 114¾.

Bank shares showed very little change. Northern Bank "A" were done at 97s 6d, closing with buyers bidding 95s and no sellers under 100s. B shares can be had at 48s 6d. Westminster Bank Parts changed hands a few times at 98s. Union Bank of Australia 6.

CORPORATION STOCK.

Quiet conditions prevailed in the Corporation stocks and Public Boards, owing to the scarcity of sellers. There was a demand for the 3½ per cent. 1940 issue at 99, 3½ per cent. 1942 at 100, and 3½ per cent. 1973 stock at 100. 4½ per cent. 1951 stock was inquired for also at 106, 3½ per cent. Mortgages 1943-53 at 100½, and 4½ per cent. Mortgage 1940 at 100. Belfast Harbour 3½ per cent. 1953-58 stock was wanted at 99½, Water Commissioners 3½ per cent. 1953-63 stock at 101, 3½ per cent. 1963 stock at 98½, and Northern Ireland Electricity 3 per cent. Guaranteed stock is bid for at 93. Some Belfast Corporation 5 per cent. 1945 stock was dealt in at 110½, and Belfast Harbour 3½ per cent. 1961-68 stock at 99½. Water Commissioners 5 per cent. 1950-60 marked 111¼.

In Local Rails sellers predominated. A small odd lot of Great Northern Ord. was done at 4, and market finished with sellers at 5. The 4 per cent. Debenture stock is offered at 58½, 4 per cent. Guaranteed stock at 41, and 4 per cent. Preference at 9½. Belfast and County Down Ord. can be had at 4. 4 per cent. Debenture was asked for at 48½.

Canadian Pacific Railway Ord. stock fetched 6 11-16.

SPINNING AND TEXTILES.

Spinning and Textiles were generally firm. British Celanese 2nd Preference brought 4s 7½d. J. & P. Coats Ordinary changed hands at 38s, Courtaulds at 37s 7½d, 37s 1½d, and Preference at 24s 3d. U.S. TRADE OUTLOOK.

AS MIDLAND BANK SEES IT.

STRONG CONTRIBUTION DOUBTFUL.

The Midland Bank "Review" does not need any excuse for referring once again, this time more directly than before, to the business situation in the United States. During the last three months the influence of the United States as a drag on business all over the world has become still more evident and still more perplexing as a factor in developments yet to come. This very uncertainty which holds back enterprise in many directions makes it necessary to try, however great the difficulties, to formulate some more or less definite opinion on the possibilities of an early and sustained revival in the United States.

After weighing up the pros and cons, the "Review" comes to a conclusion which is not likely to be palatable to the optimists. The opinion is expressed that for the time being the outlook for business in the United States can hardly be regarded as glowing, and that consequently it is doubtful whether the world can count upon a strong contribution from America to an early revival of international trade.

The conclusion of an Anglo-American trade agreement would help in that direction, but it is evident that Great Britain's main concern at the moment must be to sustain the volume of domestic business activity, while avoiding any unguarded action that might further depress international trade, especially within the sterling area.

DERRY AND SOMME ANNIVERSARY.

WAR MEMORIAL CEREMONY.

SERVICE IN CATHEDRAL.

The citizens of Derry faithfully remembered the gallant sons of the North-West who fell at the Battle of the Somme, and the customary evening service at the War Memorial was as dignified and impressive as in former years.

Prior to attending a service of remembrance in the Cathedral where the preacher was the Rev. W. J. Dawson, M.A. (late of the Royal Artillery), Ballymoyer, Co. Armagh, the members of the 10th Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers (Old Comrades' Association) paraded to the Diamond where in the vicinity of the War Memorial a large number of citizens had assembled.

The parade was in charge of Lieut.-Colonel R. S. Knox, D.S.O., Coleraine, and included the Mayor (Capt. Sir James Wilton, M.C.).

Lieut.-Colonel Knox having laid a wreath at the base of the memorial buglers sounded the Last Post. Two minutes silence followed, and then came the Reveille. The Hamilton Flute Band, which led the procession, then played "Abide With Me," after which the parade proceeded to the Cathedral service, where the offering was in aid of the Earl Haig Fund.

Rev. W. J. Dawson in the course of his address said no one could come to their lovely city, or walk on its ancient walls, or stand in the shadow of its glorious Cathedral without feeling that something was different there.

There was brave effort, a memorial to a great effort made and a great crisis passed. They met in that stately city to make themselves familiar with the meaning for which those stones stood and testify to their love and undying gratitude for the fallen of the city and county, and also for all the fallen in the war. Speaking of the necessity of working for peace, he said it might be that war would break out again, and, if so, they could enter the war with clean hands and a pure heart only if they knew in their hearts and consciences that they had done everything possible to avoid it. Religion was temporarily divorced from the realities of life, as if it were not the one great reality of life. The day would come when everyone would have to declare himself openly and courageously on the side of Christ against rationalism.

Speaking of the efforts in modern times towards social reform, he said they looked around the borders of their large cities and saw municipal schemes for the housing of the people, because public opinion demanded them and because public opinion believed that this would remove the root cause that produced sin and degradation. It was for them to see that public opinion in this and other respects was fostered and guided along Christian lines, because, unfortunately, there were organisations strongly entrenched which stood for the overthrow of belief in God.

BELFAST BARMAN'S ACTION.

TRUCK ACT REFERRED TO.

APPLICATION FAILS.

A remitted action came before the Deputy Recorder sitting in the Recorder's Court, Belfast, in which Bernard Devlin, barman, Drumadrough, Antrim Road, sued Richard Byrne, Garmoyle Street, to recover £31 10s, balance of wages, or, in the alternative, money deducted from the plaintiff's wages in contravention of the Truck Acts 1831-96, during the period August 17, 1936, to October 30, 1937.

The deduction, amounting to 10s a week from 40s, was stated to have been for food.

Mr. G. Grant (instructed by Mr. Thos. J. O'Neill) appeared for the plaintiff, and Mr. T. J. Campbell, K.C., M.P. (instructed by Mr. John M. Hughes) represented the defendant.

Evidence having been heard at some length, the question raised was whether, in view of the Truck Acts, the duties performed by the plaintiff came under the description of manual labour and not under labour requiring the exercise of mental qualities.

Mr. Grant contended that everything the plaintiff did was manual labour, and quoted the case of a packer in the employment of wholesale drapers. There manual labour did not exclude the exercise of skill.

Mr. Campbell contended that a barman was in the like position of a shop assistant to whom the Truck Act did not apply.

His Honour held that the plaintiff did not come under the Truck Act in his employment by the defendant. He was satisfied the evidence of Mr. Byrne was correct. The action was accordingly dismissed on the merits.

MOVING SILVER BULLION.

TEN MONTHS' JOB IN U.S.

Lorries were engaged by the United States Government to move silver worth £250,000,000 fifty miles from the New York Treasury to West Point, on the Hudson River, where the new silver vaults have just been completed, states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" correspondent. The work of removal will take ten months to complete and will cost £32,000.

LANDING OF FISH AT BUNCRANA.

SHARP DECREASE REPORTED

LETTER TO HARBOUR BOARD.

Mr. W. Moore, fishery agent, in a letter Buncrana Harbour Board, which met on Friday evening, reported a sharp decrease in the landing of fish at Buncrana this season as compared with last year.

The approximate total cured this season was, he stated, 2,000 half barrels, as compared with 7,500 half barrels during the months of May and June, 1937.

Mr. Moore also referred to the adaptability of the pier, which, he said, was getting worse, and he said he could not see the solution to their present berthing and landing conditions. Even their old stone pier, he added, gave better satisfaction than the present one with its £30,000 expenditure.

It was decided to write and thank Mr. Moore for collecting this information and passing it on to the Board.

THE KING AND QUEEN BACK.

WEEK-END AT WINDSOR.

The King and Queen reached Euston at 8 a.m. to-day on their return from Birkhall, near Balmoral, where they had been staying since the funeral of the Countess of Strathmore.

Later on they drove to Royal Lodge, Windsor Great Park, where they will spend the week-end.

INQUEST ON LONDON WOMAN.

During an operation in St. Gile's Hospital, Camberwell, London, upon Mrs. Hilda Eliza Rowland (50), wife of the prospective Labour candidate for Balham and Tooting, a surgical swab was left in her abdomen, and this was found after a second operation.

Mrs. Rowland died later, and at the inquest at Camberwell yesterday, the jury returned a verdict of death by misadventure and added the rider, "We are of the unanimous opinion that more stringent measures could and should be taken in checking up the swabs after the operations."

Nearly 50 medical students from King's College Hospital were present at the inquest, which the Coroner (Mr. A. Douglas Cowburn) said was one of considerable public importance because it concerned the precautions taken in connection with surgical operations.

KILLING A CHILD BY KINDNESS.

SO SAY PROSECUTION.

WOMAN AND 11-YEAR SON.

"TOYS HIS ONLY EDUCATION."

When Mrs. Rebecca Burman (46), of Cuxwold, Lincs., was charged at Lindsey Quarter Sessions at Lincoln to-day with wilfully neglecting her 11-year-old son in such a manner as to be likely to cause injury to his health, Mr. Walker Carter, prosecuting, said that if the treatment which Mrs. Burman had been giving to her child had been allowed to continue the boy would have become a physical and mental wreck and would probably have died.

When the case was heard as Caistor Police Court Dr. G. W. H. Townsend, deputy medical officer of health for Lindsey, said that in his opinion the woman was killing her child by kindness.

Mrs. Burman had elected to go for trial by jury at Quarter Sessions. She pleaded not guilty.

Mr. Carter said that Mrs. Burman rented two rooms at Cuxwold. When inquiries came to be made into the circumstances in which the child was living they revealed a series of the most amazing facts. The doctors who examined the boy found there was nothing organically wrong with him. He suffered from no disease of any sort except that his tonsils were enlarged, but he had been kept for the first three months of this year upon a diet consisting entirely of soft foods.

HIS DIET.

Breakfast—Bread and milk or porridge and weak tea, with an occasional orange or banana.

Mid-day meal—Beef tea or ground rice pudding, and occasionally stewed fruit, custard, blanc mange or jelly.

Evening meal, at 5 or 6—Bread and milk or porridge, or perhaps an orange or beef tea.

Each of these meals, it was alleged, was given to that child once a day.

The windows of that room in which he lived, said Mr. Carter, were kept closed. There was an oil stove in the room, in which the cooking was done. He never saw any other children. He had not been to school since 1933 and no effort had been made to teach him anything. He played with leaden toys and paper aeroplanes, and these were the sole means he had of exercising his intellectual powers. He could not read and he was mentally slow, frightened, and cowed.

COULD NOT STAND PROPERLY.

The boy became pale, languid and emaciated. He developed flat feet and could not stand properly, for his legs were wasted as a result of not being used.

"It is a very unpleasant thing," said Mr. Carter, "to charge a woman with neglecting her child, but it is still more unpleasant when it is conceded on all hands that she loves the child and that her desire is not to harm him."

Mrs. Burman at the Police Court refused to allow the child to go to a home, said Mr. Carter, but on May 21 the boy was taken to Brigg Infirmary, where under normal treatment and taking solid foods he had already made a remarkable improvement.

Dr. Townsend, in evidence, said that for three months the boy had been in bed with the windows of the room closed. When he visited the house there was a fire in the room and the windows were closed, although it was a fine sunny day. There were no other children about, and Mrs. Burman said that she did not consider it was good for him to have excitement. There was no foundation for that belief, said the doctor.

Dr. Bedford, of Immingham, said that the boy had scarcely enough energy to talk, and he could not stand properly. For two years he had not seen any children, according to his mother. If that state of affairs had continued he would probably have lost his life.

Mrs. Ethen Green, matron of the Brigg Infirmary, said that when the boy was admitted on May 22 he was emacipated, pale, and his skin was practically transparent.

THE RESULT.

The jury found Mrs. Burman guilty. She was bound over for three years on condition she obeys the orders of the local authority as to the care and treatment of the child.

TINY SCHOOLMATES DROWNED.

FELL INTO CANAL AT BOOTLE

ATTEMPT AT RESCUE FAILS.

Two little schoolmates were drowned when they fell into the Leeds and Liverpool Canal at Litherland Road, Bootle, on Friday.

They were Albert Hector Buchan, aged six, of Gloucester Road, Bootle, and Isaac John Richardson, aged seven, of Cedar Street, Bootle.

Attracted by cries, Michael Reardon and Edward Walsh, both of Bootle, jumped into the water, which was eight feet deep at the spot, and recovered the body of Buchan.

THREE ON CONSPIRACY CHARGE.

The three young Belfastmen, who are charged with conspiracy and false pretences in connection with hire purchase transactions, were yesterday returned for trial at the Commission on bail by Mr. J. H. Campbell, R.M.

The accused are:—Ronald Harvey, Lisburn Road; Thomas Branagh, Woodstock Road, and Henry G. Pelan, Priory Park. All reserved their defence. Mr. J. M. Hughes appeared for Harvey, Mr. W. G. Wilson, jun., for Branagh, and Mr. J. J. Napier for Pelan. A watching brief on behalf of four finance companies was held by Mr. Jas F. Fitzpatrick.

When the case concluded yesterday after four days hearing,

Dr. Mills expressed his appreciation of the way Mr. T. Lowe had taken the depositions. He was amazed how, in such a complicated case, he had kept the evidence so clear and had arranged the numerous exhibits.

Mr. Campbell said he was glad to hear Dr. Mills congratulate Mr. Lowe. He, too, had been amazed at times to note how quickly and efficiently Mr. Lowe had got through the work.

Mr. Hughes, on behalf of himself and his colleagues, associated himself with Dr. Mills' remarks.

PUBLICAN FINED

AT CASTLEDERG SESSIONS.

At Castlederg Petty Sessions on Friday, before Mr. J. O. H. Long, R.M., John Herbert Coulter, publican, Main Street, Castlederg, was fined 40s for opening during prohibited hours, and his licence endorsed. He was also fined £4 for failing to admit a policeman, and Samuel Faulkiner, Craigmonaghan, and Bertie Lyons, Dartans, were each fined £2 for being on the premises.

Evidence was given by Sergeant Flanagan and Constable Hall.

Coulter said Faulkiner was his brother-in-law and Lyons his best friend. They had been to a party and he brought them in for tea. No drink was served.

Faulkiner and Lyons corroborated.

In another case Coulter was fined 40s for driving in a manner dangerous to the public, and his licence was suspended for six months. He was also fined 1s for failing to produce an insurance policy within the specified time.

THE KING'S CUP AIR RACE.

LAST MINUTE SCRATCHINGS.

19 'PLANES TAKE PART.

In perfect weather conditions 19 'planes took off in the 17th King's Cup air race in Hatfield Aerodrome (Herts) to-day.

A last-minute disappointment was the scratching of Mr. W. C. Devereux's A.D.H. Comet, which was to have been flown by Flight-Lieut. C. S. Staniland, the famous test pilot.

This year competitors had to cover 1,000 miles by making 20 laps on a 50-mile triangular circuit from Hatfield to Buntingford (Herts), then to Barton Aerodrome (Beds), and then back to Hatfield.

The race is handicapped, and Capt. E. W. Percival in Viscountess Wakefield's Percival New Gull started just over two hours and a half after the machines with the biggest handicap allowance.

There were two women passengers in the competing 'planes, Mrs. Clouston, who flew with her husband, and Miss Paddy Nasmith, who flew in Sir Derwent Hall Caine's "B.A.4," piloted by Mr. T. W. Morton.

The short new course gave plenty of thrills at the turns, where the pilots had to bank sharply.

By the time Captain Percival had taken off fourteen of the competitions had finished their first five laps, and Hughesdon, the leader, was on his sixth lap.

(1) Cliff, 145 m.p.h.

(2) Hughesdon, 134 m.p.h.

NEXT WEEK'S NAVAL VISITORS.

PORTRUSH AND BANGOR.

H.M.S. NELSON AND H.M.S. RODNEY

During this month North of Ireland ports are, as already announced, to receive visits from two of the largest fighting units afloat belonging to the Home Fleet, whilst the new flagship of the Reserve Fleet will be in Irish waters before concluding a series of tests. Their stay on the Clyde concludes on Monday, when the ships leave and separate to visit, as is customary at this time of the year, seaports in the British Isles. The Nelson, flagship of Admiral Sir C. Forbes, K.C.B., D.S.O., goes direct to Portrush, and the Rodney, battleship, of almost equal size, arrives at Bangor, Co. Down.

The Nelson has a displacement in the water of 33,950 tons and the Rodney is just 50 tons lighter. The engines of both develop shaft noise power of 45,000 and their armament is of the latest.

Admiral Sir Charles Forbes, the Commander-in-Chief of the Home Fleet, only assumed that responsible post in April last, succeeding Admiral Sir Roger Backhouse, who in September next is to replace Admiral of the Fleet Lord Chatfield as First Sea Lord of the Admiralty.

After undergoing for the past two years in the Fleet Reserve at Devonport large repairs and re-arming as a 6-inch gun cruiser, H.M.S. Effingham is to replace the Hawkin's cruiser at Portsmouth as flagship of Vice-Admiral Max K. Horton, C.B., D.S.O., commanding the Reserve Fleet.

Captain B. A. W. Warburton-Lee, the flag captain and chief of staff to Admiral Horton, has assumed charge of the Effingham, and is taking her on a cruise around the British Isles. The tour is to terminate at Portsmouth on July 23 and a few days before the date the Effingham is to call at Bangor.

YORKS WON TOSS.

BUT AUSTRALIANS SENT IN TO BAT.

CROWD CHEERED DECISION.

BRADMAN OBSTACLE AS USUAL.

Brian Sellers, the Yorkshire captain and one of England's Test selectors, took the bold course when winning the toss at Bramall Lane, Sheffield, to-day of sending the Australians in to bat.

Following a violent thunderstorm on Friday and much rain during the night, the pitch was so wet that despite the use of the absorbent roller and blankets, the start was delayed, but the sun shone brightly with a threat of trouble to the batsmen if no rain came.
